had pulled to 7-6 and completely taken over the momentum.

"We were up seven and could have scored more," said Taylor, whose team stranded 12 runners on base for the game and two in each of the first four innings. "John got a little tired; he tried to finess the ball over the plate, and they started hitting him."

The Hawks manufactured the tying run in the fifth as Andy Wingert scored on a sacrifice fly by Dan Doig. They threatened again in the sixth inning off first-game starter Chris Rigley with runners at second and third but couldn't score.

"I give Rigley a lot of credit," Herrington said. "He started the first game, then caught the rest of that game, the beginning of the second game and then came in and pitched again."

The Hawks opened the seventh with a walk by Kevin Zerbo and took second on a wild pitch. A fielder's choice by Mike Sacha moved him to third. After an intentional walk to Doig, Greg Hocking delivered the game winner by lacing a solid single to left center, scoring Sacha and sending the Hawks back to the regional. Every Hawk in the lineup reached base at least once. Hocking had a pair of singles with two RBI; Zerbo and Wingert had two singles with with two RBI; Zerbo and Wingert had two singles with an RBI; Jason McKenzle had two singles, and Richeson had two RBI. "It wasn't a good time for the bata to go silent. I thought we were capable of beating Western. You have to lit the ball and we didn't." Lauren Talbot threw a no-hitter for the Warriors, who defeated Walled Lake Central in 10 innings, 2-0. Talbot didn't walk anybody. Western loaded the bases in the 10th inning of the final and scored the winning run on a squeeze bunt.

The Raiders (193-18) had just one baseruner – Jessica Gold, who reached on an error.
