REFUSING "LIGHT" INSULT IN GERMANY

Denial of Match May Bring Heavy Fine.

Dresden, Germany.—A Dresden appeal court has upheld a man who complained against another for refusing to give him a light on the street. The specific charge was insult and offense.

Like most laws, this law against insult and offense has a common-sense background, although it may be abused by frivolous, or childish, or spiteful applications. The law is designed to protect to each those persons who are grossly offensive and rude to their neighbors and so are likely to create breaches of the peace. A comparable law was that on the statute-books of the states of the United States long before prohibition, which forbade drinking alcoholic liquor on trains. Experience had proved that many times train drinkers became drunk and abusive and a menace to their fellow passengers.

Often Wrongly Applied.

The great trouble with such laws as that which upheld in Dresden is that they are often wrongly applied. Any man asked for a light late at night by a hazy stranger in a deserted place might well think that the old scheme of asking for a light preparatory to pulling a robbery of the wayfarer was about to be tried. Certainly, the average person in the United States would be at light ushers in deserted streets, and more so at strangers who ask the time. Still, a law against insult and offense might be a boon for lightvagrants in subway cars who would ticket buyers at some New York theaters.

Fines up to $100 and even imprisonment are the penalties which threaten the Germans who refuse a light to a stranger in the street, anxious to ignite his cigarette, cigar or pipe.

This is the great surprise for the German world of smokers provided as the verdict in the case before the Dresden court of appeal.

Insult Upheld.

Herr Krause, hurrying home one night last year through the streets of Dresden, had somewhat brusquely refused the request of a fellow pedestrian that he should stop and allow him to light his cigarette on the glowing end of Herr Krause's cigar.

The pedestrian took Herr Krause's refusal so much to heart that he pursued him and had him arrested by a policeman, who took Herr Krause's address.

The owner of the unlighted cigarette then proceeded to sue Herr Krause before the civic court for insult and offense, which under German law is punishable with heavy fines and even imprisonment. Herr Krause was found guilty of having insulted the would-be smoker, and was sentenced to pay a small fine.

He appealed against this verdict, however, and the Dresden court of appeal absolved him from the fine, but declared at the same time that "the refusal to oblige a person with a light can constitute an insult."

No Sound-Proof Room Has Been Developed

Henry Bernstein, French playwright, hired a builder to build him a sound-proof room in his apartment. The proof room cost 15,000 francs and failed to be sound-proof, so Bernstein sued the builder and recovered 37,000 francs damages.

Publisher Horace Stoker, discussing the case, said: "Writers are always looking in vain for sound-proof rooms. You remember the sound-proof room that Carlyle built on top of his little house in Chelsea. It wasn't sound-proof at all."

"Carlyle couldn't sleep in his Chelsea home on account of a rooster in a neighbor's garden. At last, worn out, a nervous wreck, he went to the neighbor and said: "

"For the love of heaven kill that rooster of yours, or it will kill me. Look at my bloodshot eyes and shaking hands. The bird crows all night and I never get a wink of sleep any more."

"No, no, Mr. Carlyle," said the neighbor. "It don't—it can't crow all night."

"Perhaps not," said Carlyle, "but when it does crow, if he there, breathless and tense, waiting for it to begin again."
