Board of Education Edict Fails In High School, All Grades Dismissed

Governing bodies may decree that there must be school—but what is a school without its pupils? No school at all.

So there was no school to speak of in Farmington last Friday morning, although the Board of Education, in discussing the matter last month, decided that there had been enough of too many days missed this year, and that school should "keep" on the day after Decoration Day.

When nine o'clock came, however, the attendance in the entire high school totaled 25. Many children whose parents had planned a four-day holiday were missing. The Seniors had chosen the day for the first "skip-day" the meaning of which is that Seniors must demonstrate that they are above all the rules which oppress their inferiors.

With but a handful of students in each grade, and most of them wanting to go to the truck meet at Ferndale, it was decided to dismiss the 25 students in high school at once and the grades at noon.

Which somewhat took the edge off the Seniors' "skip-day."

PHILO McCULLEY DISPLAYS TALENT IN JUNIOR PLAY

Comedy Given By Class Of 1929 Is Entertaining; George Grimm Effective

If plays presented in Farmington Town Hall continue to reveal new youthful talent as have the last two, this community will have an abundance of theatrical material for some years to come.

Two young people of unusual ability, Johnny Lapham and Beulah Gullen, were "discovered" in a Farmington Players comedy two weeks ago, and on Wednesday evening another young man showed real capability on the stage.

He is Philo McCulley, and though only a junior in high school, his performance alone made the play a success. He was ably assisted by George Grimm appearing as a manufacturer who wished to marry his daughter to his business partner, an uncouth and wholly unsophisticated young man.

Ethel, the manufacturer's daughter, played by Eleanor Perry, preferred a "man who had a partner as a "Dor Juan" provided the basis of the play.

Helen Westphal, who was well-suited to the part of the manufacturer's wife, who discovered on the part of her husband some evidences of the "Don Juan" behavior which she thought so desirable in a prospective son-in-law.

The complete cast of the play, which was to be shown Thursday evening also, is as follows:

Harriet Simmons, his wife
Ethel Simmons, their daughter
Eleanor Perry, their partner
Philo McCulley, a motion picture director
Winifred Seelye, a young Chicago blond
Glen Werner, Esther Seelye's father
Dorothy Corson, Sally Otis

Friends of Ethel
Annie, a maid
Ruth Macomber
Sadie Bloom
Lois Murphy
Taxi Driver
Roy Young

The play was directed by Miss Dorothy Inalls of the high school faculty. Between acts music was furnished by the high school orchestra and by the Harmony Four.

FARMINGTON BOY'S INTEREST BRINGS RARE FROG STORY

Frog Lived Encased In Block For A Year, Without Food, Air, Or Water

Not all learning comes from books, and at least one member of the general science class of Farmington High School is alert to learn of new things going on in the world.

When Harry A. Grov, who lives in Farmington Township and is a member of the general science class in Farmington High School, saw an item in a newspaper a little over a year ago about a frog that was being placed in a concrete block for a year, to see whether it could live without air, food, or water, Harry put it down on his calendar. He marked the date so that he would be sure to find out about the result twelve months later. On January 1, when he put up a new calendar, he "carried over" the entry upon it.

Then, when the year was up, he wrote to Wills Point, Tex., where the frog had been "buried" for a year.

The secretary of the Lions Club at Wills Point, answered Harry's letter. According to Harry's letter, a newspaper clipping which had accompanied it, the frog was incarcerated in the concrete block, "the greatest celebration ever held in Wills Point" a "frog opening."

With immense pomp and before a huge and curious crowd, the block was opened and the frog removed.

According to several doctors, the frog was unconscious when taken out. However, he quickly showed signs of life, according to the report, and soon was "very much alive." However, "so many nuzzled the object of attraction that he passed away on the fifth day after the "frog opening," according to the Lions Club secretary.

"However, the writer said, "had he been left out in the sunshine without anybody handling him, he would have been alive today; several doctors who came here and examined him said."

An undertaking firm in a nearby town, certain that the frog would be found dead in the block, provided a specially-made casket, lined with silk and satin, in which "Mr. Tutt," as the frog was nicknamed, was buried amid ceremonies greater than those accorded most human beings when they pass.

The event as reported from Texas was related by Harry to the general science class at the High School and discussed by the class. Harry makes his home with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Empson.

"LIVING ON CHARITY"

William Southern, Jr., editor of the Independence (Mo.) Examiner, says:

That the man who has no pride in his home town is of very little if any use to the community.

The man or woman who accepts everything an organized community can give and makes no return, accepts no community obligations and refuses civic duty is living on charity.

Service is the rent we pay for the privilege of being a citizen and receiving the benefits of citizenship.
