Christmas Decorations

Placing to Travelers
AS THE train passed through the towns one could see from the train's windows the lighted trees in the houses. The shades left up in people's houses. One could see trees twinkling within, wreaths at windows, a feeling of coziness and cheer.

Where it was snowing one could see snow falling gently on the green trees, twinkling like jewels over the lighted trees. The snow seemed to like to take part in the Christmas celebrations of the towns.

In town after town there were gay lights down the streets, and above all, a tree in the center of the town.

And while the people in the towns were rightly, and without a doubt, proud of their Christmas decorations, their town showing cheer and beauty, little could the people in the towns ever know how much joy and happiness these lighted trees meant to those traveling on trains.

They bring Christmas to the traveler. They almost seem to carry a whiff of the pine woods—a whiff of Christmas green.

And, as sometimes happens, it rains, then, oh then, the Christmas trees all lighted mean more than ever to those who must travel around Christmas time. The dreariness and the dullness of rain at Christmas times is eliminated by the lights twinkling—the Christmas trees of the towns.

Thanks to the towns for all they do—not only for themselves but for travelers at Christmas tide—Mary Graham Bonner. (© 1928 Western Newspaper Union.)

IT AIN'T THE GIFT

"It ain't the gift a feller gives, It ain't the shape nor size, That sets the heart to beatin' an' Puts sunshine in the eyes."

"It ain't the value of the thing, Nor how it's wrapped nor tied, It's something else aside from this That makes you glad inside."

"It's knowin' that it represents A love both deep an' true That counts to slip in your heart An' counts to slip in you."

"It's knowin' that they love you, An' they tell you in this way, Just sure o' callin' out the things They really long to say."

"So it ain't the gift a feller gives, Nor how it's wrapped nor tied, It's knowin' that fills love you That makes you glad inside."

—Suzette Randall

Christmas Pool Donated to Eight Little Jenks

TOM said Hartley Rice to his partner, "Remember when we were doing our Christmas shopping together as kids, and you got so tired you proposed giving me the quarter you'd intended spending on my gift?"

"Yes, and when I insisted on our giving back the quarter for your present to me, you thought you'd been cheated."

Hartley laughed reminiscently, and continued: "I was just thinking—I had intended to spend $25 on a gift for you this Christmas, and I suppose you were going to be just as idiotic about your gift."

"Yes, I'd even thought of a statuette for that amount, that you probably wouldn't have had a place for anyway."

"There you are!" exclaimed Hartley. "Now I don't propose that we exchange a roll of bills, but suppose we pool our gift money, and present it to Poor Jenks here in the office, for the new baby."

So the eighth little Jenks got this Christmas pool—Mertle Koon Cherryman.
