Do you ever carve initials in your furniture at home? No, of course not, but if people did some of the things at home that they do in school, they would be out to be in trouble a good deal of the time.

Students, do you think your mother would allow you to carve your name or your girl's name on the piano bench? It isn't likely. The teachers continually forbid you to deface the desks. Why not heed their suggestions as you do your mother's?

Let's all make a resolution. It won't be a New Year's resolution but we can call it a spring vacation resolution. It shall read: Resolved: that hereafter, we, the entire student body of Farmington, will cease all obnoxious carvings on the school building or therein, and do all in our power to prohibit others from the same, endeavoring to save the interior of our school from ruin.

ATTRACTS SMALL CROWD

The annual Mardi-Gras was held Friday, March 21 at the high school building. The crowd, compared with last year's, was small.

The assembly program proved to be the biggest money maker. The crowd enjoyed the negro actors, Dick Fox and Frank Kerr very much. They acted their parts like regular darlings from "de south".

Roy Young's fine singing voice made the young women sigh and Glenn Werner's funny whistles caused many a giggle. George Mairs proved to be a good questioner for Frank Kerr while Mike Nicholson couldn't remember the words for "The Big Rock Mountains" to save his neck.

The gym program features were tumblings and acrobatics by the eighth grade and a boxing match between Ray Fendit and Philo McCulley.

The dance proved to be quite a success. A great many attended and the floor was filled most of the time.

The small attendance kept the side shows from being a big success, but for the number of people present they responded well and some of the shows had full houses. The tea room attracted many while those eager for music attended the minstrel show, and those who wanted thrills attended the haunted house. Many up to date people attended the style show where they saw the very newest from Paris.

GRILS' BASEBALL SCHEDULE

May 20—Hazel Park, there.
May 22—Ferndale, here.

HI-Y ELECTION OF OFFICERS

At the Hi-Y meeting Monday, March 17, the annual election of officers was held.

The retiring president, Philo McCulley, conducted the election and the new officers will assume their duties at the next meeting. John Lapham was elected president with Edward Measell succeeding Glen Werner, as vice president. Alvin Nicholson is the new secretary who will take Roy Young's place. Lewis Maas will take care of the Hi-Y funds for the next twelve months succeeding Kenneth Langbecker.

STUDENT COUNCIL

At the student council meeting held March 19, prices were set for the shows and the program in the assembly and gymnasium for the carnival. Philo McCulley and Helen Westfall were appointed to sell tickets.

FAREWELL PARTY

The Hi-Y Club of Farmington put on a farewell dance for the Seniors Wednesday, March 26 before they leave for Washington. There were refreshments of ice cream and cake and everyone enjoyed the dance very much.

PERSONALS

Phyllis Kahrl of Plymouth visited the school Monday with her cousin, Gladys Krumm. Henry Olin, '29, arrived in Farmington Sunday, March 23 for his spring vacation. He will return to St. John's Military Academy next Monday. The senior class leaves for Washington D. C. Saturday at about 2 o'clock.

'Protect Children' To Be Campaign Slogan

That tuberculosis begins early in youth in the form of a non-fatal disease called "childhood tuberculosis" and may be prevented through protective measures taken in childhood is the point which the Michigan Tuberculosis and county tuberculosis societies will stress in an intensive one-month educational campaign opening April 1.

The campaign third in an annual series dealing with early discovery of tuberculosis, will have as its slogan "Protect Children From Tuberculosis." It will be carried into effect with the help of hundreds of volunteers in the state, many of whom are the same persons who conduct the Christmas seal sale, money from which makes this campaign possible.

This newer aspect of tuberculosis control, states the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, is based on recent discoveries demonstrating the wide prevalence of infection in children. An average of 82 per cent of children at 15 years of age are known to be infected with tuberculosis, while from three to five out of every one hundred have actual childhood tuberculosis. Germ infection, plus inadequate bodily resistance, leads to the childhood sickness.

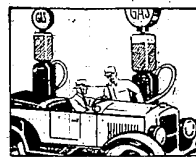

Q. What was the first National Park?
A. The Yellowstone National Park.

Q. Who was called "Fuss and Feathers"?
A. General Winfield Scott.

The following four measures will be recommended in the April campaign as necessary to prevent development of childhood types of tuberculosis into active disease later in life: separation from sick people, plenty of rest, training in health habits, and frequent medical attention.

Q. What was the first National Park?
A. The Yellowstone National Park.
Q. Who was called "Fuss and Feathers"?
A. General Winfield Scott.

One Out of Five Is Wasted

You wouldn't deliberately throw fuel away, and yet that is what you do when you tolerate a furnace coil. Investigation proves that one of every five shovelful of fuel goes to heat the water in your furnace coil and so is wasted from your heating system.

That's something to think about.

And, too, when your furnace fire is low or out—no hot water. Not so good, either.

To prevent this enormous waste, engineers have developed a new gas water heater that gives constant hot water at low cost. This heater can use only a small amount of gas and being built like a thermos bottle, it can't leak heat. It banishes the old wasteful furnace coil forever.
