The Faith of the Pioneers

A HUNDRED years

ago Nathaniel Wyeth left Boston, in March, with his company of intrepid pioneers for Oregon. It was a colonization expedition, an undertaking beset with hardship and peril. But they were fortified with more than equipment and provisions—they were sustained by boundless faith in the greatness of their goal and their ability to attain it.

Though they failed to see the fulfillment of their dream, the trail they blazed inspired the development of a great state that today is the worth of a million people.

The attainment of any worth-while goal requires faith, and there is nothing like a growing bank account to develop faith in yourself. Especially is this true when the money is deposited with this institution, where complete facilities, far-flung influence and friendly helpfulness add much to the value of the account.

The Usual Things

IT IS DIFFICULT to imagine the world today without some of the things that make our living in it so pleasant and comfortable. How naturally we lift the telephone receiver, step into an automobile, and look for the news of our community in the newspaper—throughout our lives.

Another of these usual, invaluable things, accepted as part of the routine of existence, is the guidance given by the advertisements in this newspaper in supplying our wants regularly. We read them. They help us to save time and money. And our lives go on—more easily and more fully.

Every week the advertisements suggest ways in which we can get things we want with the greatest possible satisfaction to ourselves. They tell us of new conveniences and comforts of which we would not otherwise have known. They help us to get down-to-the-dollar satisfaction. They assure us of proved values.

Advertisements are among the necessities today—read them regularly
