SHORT CHANGE CROOKS

Business men are warned to look out for "short change" artists working in the state. It hardly seems probable, but they manage to gather in many victims, especially among green clerks.

Most of the gangs use pretty women as decoys. She enters a place of business, tenders a bill of large denomination in payment for some article costing a few cents. When she has received the article and her change she apparently discovers she had enough silver in her purse to have paid for her purchase in the first place.

She doesn't want so much change and starts trading it back for larger bills, her purpose being to get the clerk or proprietor confused and very often she walks out with ten dollars that does not belong to her.

Easy enough to circumvent them if you are on to their racket. Become suspicious the moment a large bill is offered in exchange for a trifling purchase. Your suspicions will be verified if the purchaser, no matter how innocent they may appear, suddenly finds some extra silver and wants to start trading. Show them through the door and keep the cash register closed.—Ionia County News.

The Truth Does Sometimes Hurt

Of course no Holly woman would fib to the census enumerated about her age. But an enumerator from another town tells us he has had a number of such instances, and that the law requires him to make a good guess at the correct figure when he feels that the party is not telling the truth. In one town it has been discovered that a woman gave the same age as when the census was last taken.—Holly Herald.

Holly Township 3,170

The population of Holly Township, as shown by a preliminary count of the returns of the Fifteenth Census, taken as of April 1, 1930, is 3,170, as compared with 2,678 on January 1, 1920. There were 143 farms enumerated in this area.

This includes Holly Village.

Wall Street, not Main Street, usually wins the hog calling contests.

A friend has gone from here to there.
He left a vacant space;
The corner doesn't seem the same
Since he left the place.
Neighbors have seen him come and go,
Always there on time;
Back and forth for many years,
In rain or shine.
And tho his steps grew slower,
He always kept up the fight;
Tried so hard to carry on
And always seemed bright.
And now his work is finished,
He's on a well earned rest;
So let's not mourn, take up his work and carry on,
That would please him best.
—His Neighbors.

Oleo vs. Profit

Every pound of oleo consumed kills the market for about 9 quarts of milk. How can the dairy business remain prosperous if dairy farmers do not help the market for their own product?

Milk is the most economical food. The farmer should use it constantly. He buys it from himself at wholesale instead of paying retail prices for substitutes.

It is claimed that the farmer buys one-third of all the oleo produced. In so doing he helps create a surplus of butter and loses more money by low butter prices than he gains in buying cheaper oleo.

What do you think of the argument offered by the farmer who buys oleo? He kicks about the low price for milk and butter, no money in the business, etc.; yet, he says butter prices are too high and buys oleo to save money. In other words, too low to sell, but too high to buy. Not logical is it?
