NEW ADVENTURES.

THE Byrd expedition has returned in triumph. Those who have kept in touch with the explorations of this expedition are convinced that a most valuable contribution has been made to science. These definite results will doubtless keep scientists busy in their laboratories for months and months to come.

Aside from the benefits accruing to science, the expedition has given the world a magnificent demonstration of courage, strength and fortitude of the highest possible attainment. Examples of this courage and fortitude were evidenced in the daily life of every man. A supreme test of it was when Commander Byrd set out from the base on that 13-hour arduous journey to the South pole.

L. A. Barrett. All he had to sustain him was a gun and a field glass. The compass was of no value. The throwing away of the sack of provisions as well as the dangers encountered by mountain peaks were also tests of this courage. But courage was rewarded, for it was a momentous occasion when Commander Byrd threw over the South pole the American flag weighted down with a stone taken from the grave of the man in whose honor the airplane was named.

It was a very happy and significant fact that no lives were lost on the expedition. Every man got home safely. Commander Byrd speaks of these results in a very modest way, giving credit to his men and his profound gratitude to Providence—credit where credit is due.

Now that the South pole problem has just been solved, doubtless the next great adventure will be an attempt to delve more deeply into the nature of the stars. A plane has been made in Germany capable of a speed of 95 miles per hour driven by powder rockets. A German scientist (Gottlieb Espenlaub) recently made aerial flight using three rockets, each burning six seconds. Might it not be possible to invent an apparatus capable of recording definite facts; to be projected on these rockets into the planets of our own solar system? Are any of these planets inhabited? If so would communication ever be possible?

Nothing seems impossible of accomplishment when the human mind commands the most exact scientific data, the spirit of the adventurer, and last but not doubtless the most important of all—the courage, bravery and fortitude of men who have learned how to endure.

FLAG IS RAISED OVER NEW SCHOOL ATHLETIC FIELD

Organizations And Citizens Join In Ceremonies At Flagpole Monday Morning

With a goodly number of residents of the school district in attendance, Farmington's new athletic field was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies Monday morning.

Gathered around the flagpole at the east end of the field, after marching down from the school playground, the organizations, officials and citizens participated in brief exercises to mark opening of the field. As the flag, held by former mayor W. D. Butterfield, was raised by President A. L. Ross, Edward Eaton sounded the call "to the colors," and as the flag reached the top, a salute was fired.

Rev. A. A. Schoen offered a dedicatory prayer, and Archie G. Leonard gave the dedication address. Trustees Lloyd Gullen, who with Carl Goers of the American Legion had charge of the ceremonies, expressed thanks to those who had taken part.

In the line of march were the American Legion color guard, Boy Scouts led by Commissioner Floyd Hallock, the high school band, Northwestern A. C. and Novi baseball teams, and officials, followed by citizens in automobiles.

PROBATE JUDGE TALKS AT WALLED LAKE CLUB

Judge McGaffey has been a close student of work in the juvenile field for some time, and displayed an intense interest in it. In his work as probate judge, he comes in contact with numerous juvenile problems and difficulties that requires experience and careful guidance for correction.

Seventy-five per cent of all juveniles who come under the supervision of probation officers early enough turn out to be good boys, Judge McGaffey said. He expressed satisfaction that the County juvenile building had been built and paid for before the business depression set in.
