The Radish

The radish has been cultivated from the very earliest historic times and centuries ago it attained so wide a distribution that it has been necessary to search through the world for the spots where it grows wild to write the search through the world from the spots where it grows wild to write the search through the search pany of the plant servants of mankind, its ancient cultivation in China, also make the bard search will be search the radish its such as cilling grower that its preads from the garden plots where can intends it to grow, and makes its way into near by fields, especially if the region is particular makes its way into near by fields, especially if the region is particular that the search is more standard to the search of t maget girve the impression that, it are wild in many places where it was by no means an original lababilities. The many places where it was by no means an original lababilities. The many places were the transport of the pyramid of Cheops and there are two drawings on the temples of Karnak of which one at least is undoubtedly a radish. From varying bits of evidence, sprs the scientist. De Candolle, "we gather, first, that the species prefade scally from cultivating in the west of Asia and the south of Darone, white scally from cultivating in the west of Asia and the south of Darone, white he down of castern Asia; and see coulty, that in the regions south of the Caucass is its found without any sign of culture, so that we are led to suppose that the plant its wild there. For these two reasons it appears to have come from western Asia between Palestine, Anatolia and the Caucass, perhaps also from Greece, its cultivation spreading eastward land westward from a very carried to the control of the contr

Standing near the highway which parallels the buy ahore—somewhat apart from other trees as lift of show off to better advantage—and errormoded by a protecting fence, this old residenter proudly exhibits a sign—that the visitor may understand just who be is—which imparra the sun-prising information that this trunk, one-foot from the ground, is of feet, in occumierence, his too pysred 140 feet, that he is 85 feet high and about the control of the contr

Mr. Hoover thinks that the sup-pression of gang work and racket-eering is something that the states will have to bandle, with-out federal aid. The consensus of editorial comment is that his attitude is proper, in view of the doctrine of states rights, and considering that the police power remains with the states, under the Constitution.
