It pansies with their dark impassioned faces.
Had but been given the power of human speech,
What is the lesson that from lowly place
Each tender, fragrant voice to us would teach?
Perchance in tones like thinking dewdrops sighing,
What their lives tell, their velvet lips would say:
Forget life's trials that are round these things,
And be the brightest in the darkest day.

SUMMER FOODS

Creamed lobster, lobster bisque or salad are all most enjoyed dishes at any season, but are especially well liked during warm weather when oysters are not on the market.

Lobster With Mushrooms.—Wash, peel and cut one pound of fresh mushrooms in pieces. Saute them in four table-spoonsful of butter. Add three table-spoonsful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika. Cook five minutes then add one and one-half cups of milk and one-half cup of stock (made from fish bones), cook three minutes, add one-half cup of cream, two cups of creamed lobster and two eggs well beaten. Pour into a well-greased casserole, cover with one-third of a cup of buttered crumbs and bake ten minutes in a hot oven.

Lobster à la King.—Simmer one-half cup of minced green pepper, the same of celery and one tablespoonful of minced pimiento in one tablespoonful of butter until tender. Add one tablespoonful of flour and when milk and one-half cup of milk, added gradually. Season with salt, cayenne, and add two cups of cooked flaked lobster. Heat thoroughly and serve on toast.

Lebanese Cake.—Line a bread pan or round mold with quarter-inch slices of any standard sponge cake. Put over this a layer of canned apricots, cut in pieces, then a thick layer of whipped cream lightly sweetened and flavored with almond. Another layer of cake and cream with apricots until the mold is full. Then pour over it the apricot juice which has been cooked with one-half cup of sugar until thick, and cooled. Set away in the ice chest for 12 hours or longer, then turn out on a serving dish. It may be garnished with more whipped cream and bits of apricot.

Rev. Patton of Hull, England, declares that "crimes and misdemeanors are incited and accelerated by the dress that women wear." We think the reverend gentleman's alarm and indignation come rather late. It is doubtful that women's dress of lack of it excites anyone very much in this day and time.

Eileen's Beauty Sleep Won Out

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

"IT DOES seem like the troy of fate that you should have had a fire that night," laughed Janice Bert. "And you laugh," commented Eileen dryly.

"Why not? You must have been a scream."

"I did scream anyway. Honestly, I never gave a thought to the fire itself or to the fact that father and mother were calling frantically to me to get out. All I thought of was the way I looked and the front yard full of firemen."

"What was this grand new 'beauty sleep' you were trying on this night of all nights?" asked Janice, still amused.

Eileen shook her head disconsolately. "Oh—don't ask me about it. And there I stood on the balcony in front of my room—the very spot I had so often pictured myself in! But instead of looking wonderfully lovely and writhing like a pale moon in a pale moonlight—I was a veritable comic vaudeville. My hair was down in metal waves that struck out like Topsy's pigtail all over my head. I had a frown eradicator between my eyes to smooth out the lines I am getting because I won't wear glasses. I had this white egg smeared on my face and it had dried in!"

"It sounds like some beauty sleep," "I had wanted to look particularly well at the party tonight and I was going to try this for two or three nights. I—I wanted to look well because Tom Harper, whom I haven't seen for three years, is visiting his cousin Bert. You know I always liked Tom, and then—he went away."

"What has that to do with the fire?" asked Janice.

"Everything—stupid. Don't you know that we have only a volunteer fire department in our village? You city folks know so little about suburban problems. And don't you realize that every male who is not half dead of ennui dashes out to every fire in midnight or not? And can't you begin to see that Bert dragged his cousin Tom out with him and that there they stood with the ladder at the foot of my balcony waiting to make a heroic rescue and me—"

"I suppose you would rather have smothered to death in the smoke," suggested Janice. "But I do begin to see. I climbed down the ladder with the whole family and all the firemen—including Tom—waiting at the foot to grab me in their arms. I never was so mortified in all my life. And you know, Janice, I have always made it a point to go to bed looking pretty—in case of fire or burglars. It has almost been a complex with me."

"I know—you powdered your nose brushed your hair a hundred times and chose pretty colors," Janice burst out again in merriment.

Suddenly she stopped, for her companion's eyes were full of tears.

"I just can't help it," sobbed Eileen, giving way to the emotion that at she had controlled ever since the fire. "I know it is silly, but—"

The sound of automobile wheels crushing the blue stone driveway cut short Eileen's cry.

Tom Harper pulled up in front of the porch and stopped the car.

He came straight up to Eileen with both hands outstretched. "I do hope you are none the worse," he said earnestly, looking into her eyes. "I have been so concerned. And you were so wonderfully brave."

Janice knew that the man before her had not seen the car nor the beautiful lotions nor the wrinkle eradicator. She knew it and thrilled. "Did she tell you about it?" he asked Janice, turning to her after a minute.

Janice laughed. "She has told me her vision."

"Which has nothing to do with my bravery, but rather of my beauty sleep that I thought I was having in solitude," confessed Eileen.

And then the whole story came out and Eileen forgot that she had been on the verge of a thoroughly good cry. The relief she experienced at the knowledge that Tom had not thought her dreadful after all these years of separation was enough to chase away the tears.

They talked of the fire and of the insurance adjusters, and Eileen said that the consensus of opinion was that the fire had originated in the walls among the lathing where mice had carried matches.

"Safety first," said Janice, for lack of anything better to add.

"I think it was 'beauty first' with me," laughed Eileen.

"And if Janice doesn't mind I'm going to tell you what it was with me," began Tom, looking at Eileen with his soul in his eyes.

But Janice left them alone, and then and there Tom told Eileen that he had never experienced so dreadful a moment as when he beheld her alone on that balcony where, every moment, he expected to see flames bursting out of the windows.

He told her many other things, and among them the fact that he had not even seen the curlers!

"Then you do love me," whispered Eileen.

N. A. C. Nine To Play To Games Over Week End

The Northwestern A. C. baseball team will play its third game of the season Saturday meeting the Odd Fellows nine of Clarenceville at the N. A. C. field on Middle Belt road between Seven and Eight Mile roads. The game will be called at 2:30.

On Sunday the Fisher A. C. of Detroit will furnish the opposition for the N. A. C. club, the game to be played on the Cooley High School field at Fennell and Hubbell. This game also will start at 2:30 p. m.

Northwestern A. C. got off to a good start this season winning their first two starts. Southfield was the first victim, 15 to 3, and the Elmore Merchants of Detroit were beaten, 11 to 1.

The team's schedule is practically completed.

Sunday School Class To Hold Picnic June 6

The Farmington M. E. Sunday School will hold its annual picnic at Cass Benton Park, located on Northville and Plymouth road, between Five-Mile and Seven-Mile Road, on Saturday, June 6. There will be games and fun for both young and old.

Transportation will be provided for everyone who wishes it, so let's make this a real event and have everybody out. "The more the merrier."

Matches throught out after a definite period after they have been lighted, and self-extinguished cigarette tips have been developed by the United States Bureau of Standards to lessen fire hazards.

Iowa Brothers Set New World's Record in Ford

"OWA state officials and civic leaders witnessed the establishment of a new world's non-motor, non-wheel stop automobile endurance record recently, when Ralph and Roland Davis, brothers, brought their Model A Ford to a halt at the east entrance of the state capitol in Des Moines after 2,775 hours and 46 minutes of continuous driving.

When Governor Hammill, standing with Walter Ferrell, executive secretary of the Iowa Chapter of the American Automobile Association, gave the signal to stop, the Ford had traveled a total of 47,133 miles over all sorts of roads in all sorts of weather and had exceeded by 33,689 miles and more than 2,335 hours the American non-stop endurance record which, therefore officially recognized, was made by a much heavier car under almost ideal conditions on the Indianapolis speedway last year. In the course of the endurance run, the car, known as "The City of Des Moines," covered practically the entire state of Iowa.

Engineers who examined the Ford at the conclusion of the run asserted that neither engine nor chassis showed evidence of the grueling strains to which they were subjected during the 116 days of continuous driving. Both apparently, according to the engineers, would have been good for another 50,000 miles or more.
