SUMMER'S ON THE WAY

They're just around the corner now—Summer days and such scenes as this, taken at the Oakland County Y. M. C. A. Camp on Loun Lake! And if advance indications are reliable, the camp population for the coming season will be far in excess of the 400 which enjoyed it in 1930!

The camp was so thoroughly successful during its initial season as to make permanent operation certain. Last summer's program of camp activities will be followed this coming season. It was an unusually diversified schedule, including every imaginable outdoor activity. Besides the numerous phases of campcraft proper, there was supervised work in all branches of athletics, in various subjects related to nature study, and in handicraft of many sorts. Boys were encouraged to take up, under competent instruction, the lines in which they were interested.

One activity in which every boy in camp participated was hiking. Before the season was over, the entire camp population had had many tastes of traveling, with pack on back, over the devious trails which criss-cross the whole section around Loun Lake. Among the memories of last summer is one of a sudden storm which, arising while a big hiking party was out, caught the members by surprise and drenched them to the skin. Nature experts in charge of the hikes taught the campers many things about outdoor life, and especially about the trees and plants found in the vicinity of camp. The boys learned to distinguish edible varieties of berries, to orient themselves in the woods, and to do many other things which put a real "kick" in camp life.

Then there were longer journeys made in the camp truck. Scarcely a boy but will remember vividly the trips over to East Tawas, twenty-old miles away, and the visits to the lighthouse and the United States Coast Guard station on the shore of Lake Huron, an interesting break in the camp routine, one of the several side-trips which the camp's location made possible. These jaunts made interesting breaks in camp routine.

The committees of Oakland County citizens whose enterprise has made the camp possible is planning to enlarge camp facilities this spring, so that the many benefits of camp life may be available to an even larger number of boys. Information about the camp may be obtained from any of the four Y. M. C. A. headquarters in Oakland County—Pontiac, Birmingham, Royal Oak Township, and Town and Country.

Great Conflicts That Involved Whole World

We often call the last war the World War. Actually there are others that better describe the title. Take the Seven Years' war, that was truly a World War. It was a transportation and communication war. But the fighting more nearly covered the entire globe than did that of the last war. Each, which was pretty well confined to Europe.

During the Seven Years' war, not only did men, as it has been said, fight by the military and naval activities of the belligerents, but the globe, at the expense of France the British established their supremacy in North America and their empire in India, while they assailed on land and sea the dominions of Spain in America, and in the Pacific.

Again, the wars growing out of the French revolution and the Napoleonic wars more nearly involved all of Europe than did the last war. To say nothing of their far-reaching effects, where—John Bassett Moore, interviewed for the American Review of Reviews.

Tom Titus Almost Indian Giver

By JANE OSBORN

HEAT Miss Perkins was calling "again," announced Tom Titus at the Orange City fraternity house, addressing some of whom were gathered around the large fireplace in the main hall just before dinner. "You know, she's the old girl that wants our old clothes," Miss Perkins—Jane Perkins—said.

No one was especially interested, nor especially concerned. The name suggested to them all a rather dread-up spinster, of which the college town had plenty. This particular one happened to be interested in an industrial mission: The mission, she said, needed all the old clothes it could get. They sold the garments at a very low price to men who applied for help and shelter. Sometimes, she said, all the men needed to get back on their feet again was a decent suit of clothes. It was hard to get old clothes. And it had occurred to her that the men at the fraternity houses would have lots of clothes to discard before they were really at all badly worn.

No one thought enough more about it to get together anything for the industrial mission. Then one afternoon at about five, when Tom Titus was reclining very comfortably before the open fire, Miss Perkins drew up in her driver and with jaunty self-assurance walked to the front door of the fraternity house and rang the bell. As was the custom, Tom Titus, being absent, the front door opened, and straightway he knew that this Jane Perkins was a very welcome name.

She had come for the clothes, she said, for the industrial mission was her pet charity. She and her grandmother, she explained, had not lived in town long and they felt that they were fortunate to have such an interesting cause to work for.

"I'm mighty sorry," Tom Titus told her, "that we haven't anything ready now, but I'm sure we will have tomorrow. Can you call, or shall I or one of the other men bring them around?"

"I'll call," smiled Jane brightly, and Tom found himself smiling rather eagerly back at her.

After she had gone he explained and likewise assured the brothers, one and all, that it was their duty to produce something or other for the bundle for the industrial mission.

Rodney Prind was responsible for the package that followed, but he never would have thought of it if it had not been that Tom insisted that Rodney should donate his old raincoat and his second pair of shoes, not to mention his hat, the necktie he owned but two, and all his winter underclothes to the cause. "You're a senior," Tom told him. "You'll soon be earning money and you can buy more by the time winter comes around."

So the bundle was assembled. Rodney took upon his shoulders the task of packing it up, and the next afternoon Tom wanted to give it to Miss Perkins, but he was so busy that he couldn't go with her to the mission—so he could help carry the bundle—and before he had left her he had dated her up for the next Saturday night house dance.

That night Tom discovered that his spring suit—the only suit he owned beside the one he was wearing and his tuxedo—had disappeared from his closet. Rodney Prind said that it seemed only fair. He had sent Rodney's suit.

Tom Titus made no comment, but the next morning early he found his way to the industrial mission. A bright-looking white-haired lady, apparently rather nearsighted in spite of thick-lensed glasses, was at the desk in the reception room. Ranged on hooks and hangers behind her and around this room were various suits, coats, hats, etc.

"Is there something I can do for you, young man," she said, and right away Tom knew she was Jane's grandmother. "We have some rather nice things this morning."

This was an opportunity, thought Tom. It would be easier getting his suit back this way than by explaining the prank and making himself out an Indian giver.

"I was looking for a suit, so I could go to work," said Tom with assumed wistfulness. "The one I'm wearing is borrowed."

With a little maneuvering he picked out his own suit and retired to another room to try it on. The kind old lady insisted that a dollar was ample pay for it, there in a half dozen rather good second-hand ties and some shirts, into the bargain.

Later when Jane Perkins knew Tom much better she told how she had first begun really to admire him when he gave an almost-new suit to the industrial mission. Her grandmother had told her that she let a very poor young man have it—a poor down-and-out fellow who was trying to get a job.

And even after they were engaged Tom did not tell Jane Perkins the truth of the matter. And he is wondering whether it is one of the confessions he ought to make after they are married.

Drunk Driver Is Fined $100; License Revoked

William J. Parks, 33, of Detroit was fined $100 this week by Judge Henry W. Harper for drunk driving. His driver's license was revoked for six months.

Parks was caught by Deputies Wellie Coe and Walter Lowrey, after he had driven his car wildly through a fence on the Wixom road, through a field and finally into a telephone pole. A woman companion fell out of the car. Deputies reported, suffering an injury to her arm. She was taken to Dr. E. J. Lindsey for treatment and released.
