COUNTY Y CAMP SEEKS BOYS FOR FUTURE LEADERS

Need Of Developing Home Leadership Is Emphasized By Club Speaker

The desire and need for developing among boys of this section and all of Oakland County a type of leadership which will enable them to carry on summer camp work when they grow older, was emphasized before Farmington Exchange Club at its meeting Wednesday noon by John Fleming, director of the Oakland County Y. M. C. A. Camp near Hale, Mich.

Mr. Fleming, who is in charge of the camp this summer, said that out of 16 leaders to be at the camp this year, only three are natives of this County. He pointed out that Oakland County young men, put in charge of the camp, could bring to it a group spirit not otherwise obtainable.

The County wants boys in this section and throughout the County to take advantage of the opportunity to camp for two weeks at a small cost, Mr. Fleming said. The boys benefit greatly, he stated, and also it is only in this way that Oakland County leaders can be obtained. The aim of the "Y" leaders is to have boys camp for several years during the time they are eligible, and receive training which will enable them to become leaders later on.

Charles Shain of Birmingham, one of the camp trustees told of the camp work, stating that the project was in good shape, and that the camp last year not only paid expenses but showed a profit of about $100, although boys are charged only $15 for two weeks of camping. Charles Bingham of Birmingham was also a guest. The visitors attended as guests of Earl Vivier.

NEW HOME OF THE RECORD DEDICATED AT NORTHVILLE

Dinner Celebrates Opening Of New Publishing Plant; Open House Saturday

With nearly 200 guests present, including Northville business and professional men and a number of prominent newspaper men of the state, the new publishing plant of the Northville Record was dedicated Monday evening at a dinner held in Northville Methodist Church. The paper is now in its handsome new home, built to replace the structure destroyed by fire last December.

Richard Baldwin, who recently became owner and publisher of the paper, was host at the dinner. The main address of the evening was given by Malcolm W. Binyon, editorial director of the Detroit Free Press. Other speakers included George R. Averill, Birmingham Eccentric, president of the Michigan Press Association; Joseph A. Sturgeon, field manager of the Association; Elton R. Eaton, former publisher of the Record and now publisher of the Plymouth Mail; E. E. Brown, former publisher of the Record, Farmington Enterprise and other Michigan newspapers; Mrs. Bertha Neal, owner of the Record building, and widow of Frank S. Neal, former publisher of the Record; Mayor Harry German and others. Mr. Baldwin welcomed his guests, and John Kalbfleisch of Northville acted as toastmaster.

"Open house" will be held all day Saturday, June 13, at the new plant, a brick building filled with modern printing and publishing equipment.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE GETS NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM

A complete telephone system has been installed in the new $1,500,000 Los Angeles Stock Exchange building. These telephone facilities involve an outlay of more than $50,000. In order to overcome the traditional noise of the trading floor, particular attention was given to the telephone ringing devices and buzzers and annunciators, which generally take the place of bells throughout the building.

DIAL TELEPHONES NOW SERVE DOWNTOWN CHICAGO

All downtown Chicago is now served by dial telephones, following the recent conversion of the Dearborn office from manual to dial operation. This means that practically all the telephones in Chicago's greater downtown business district are now dial telephones. In all, there are ten dial units, involving about 66,000 lines and 133,500 telephones, which include a total of 6,546 private branch exchange switchboards in the section.
