Unique Trophy Made From Telephone Cable

Not swords into plowshares, but telephone cable into trophy cup, is the transformation represented in this picture. When a telephone cable extending west from Chicago reached Omaha, so great was the interest it aroused that a section of its protective lead sheath was beaten into shape, silver-plated, polished, engraved, and presented as a competitive golf trophy for telephone men. To the left of the cup is a section of the same cable, showing the wires it contains "fanned out" for demonstration purposes.
