

Keeping Well Informed

To keep well informed of what is transpiring in one's community is of prime importance to every man, be he farmer, merchant, financier or laborer. To know what is going on about you and why is one of the first prerequisites of good citizenship.

World events and daily happenings throughout the State are reported in the metropolitan dailies but there is only one source of information concerning one's own community—the home town newspaper.

What is your City doing—what is the situation in Township affairs—what are the churches planning—what is taking place in your fraternal organizations—what community movements are afoot?

These questions of vital interest to the man who keeps himself abreast of the times are answered accurately, concisely and clearly in your own home newspaper.

-The- Farmington Enterprise