America's Trust in God

Perpetuated on Coins

The religious motto "In God We Trust" first appeared on the obverse of the country in 1864. It was the result of the increased religious fervor brought on by the Civil war. The then secretary of the treasury, S. P. Chase, received many appeals from people all over the country urging that the Dolly be recognized on the American coins in a like manner as those of foreign nations.

Secretary Chase wrote to the director of the mint at Philadelphia, November 30, 1863, stating that "no nation can be strong except in the strength of God, or safe except in his defense. The trust of our people in God should be declared on our national coins. You will cause a device to be prepared without unnecessary delay with a motto expressing in the fewest words possible this national recognition."

Several forms were suggested. Some of the coins prepared in 1862 bore the motto "God Our Trust" and some coined in 1863 were marked "God and Our Country." The familiar form of the motto was decided upon and the two-cent piece which appeared in 1864 was the first to carry it. The motto is not used on all coins.

Normal Human Instinct

for Beauty in Clothes

One reason why clothes, or at least the clothes of men, excite so little interest is that they have become drab, and this drabness is excused on the ground that clothes are meant to be useful and comfortable; and usefulness and comfort have ceased to be associated with beauty in modern life. Neither reason, of course, is true. Clothes are worn to enhance human dignity, and, at bottom, only such comfort is wanted as shall not interfere with the prevailing mode. The women who starved and shied themselves in order to keep slim, who will cripple their limbs with hobble skirts when these are the wear, and crumple their feet when pointed toes and high heels are the fashion, display a normal human instinct. Men have suffered much and gladly to wear patent leather shoes at garden parties in the height of summer, and have choked themselves rapturously with tall, stiff collars, and crumpled means little to them so long as they remain convinced of the rightness and fitness of both. Osbert Burrell in the London Saturday Review.

Anatomical Names

In the body, one might find a bunch of grapes, a cucumber bill, a small pan and a millstone, according to Lloyd Edwin Smith, writing in Hygeia Magazine. Many parts of the body were at first named by the old Romans and the Greeks for the commonest objects that they seemed to resemble.

The bunch of grapes (or its name means that in Latin) is the red lobe of the palate, the uvula. It hangs down from the soft palate as a bunch of grapes would hang between two leaves. The cucurbit (cucurbit in Latin) was named because the curvature of these four bones at the end of the vertebral column were thought to look like the bill of a cucumber.

The patella is the movable bone in the knee. Patella in Latin means a small pan.

Opium in Commerce

Opium is the dried milky juice of the unripe capsules of a poppy which for this product has been cultivated through many centuries. Every species of poppy is capable of yielding it to a greater or less extent. Opium is procured by making incisions in the poppy head or capsule, taking care not to penetrate its cavity. The juice then exudes in drops, and after being allowed to remain for a day upon the edges of the incision it is scraped off—a brownish, jellylike material. As the soft opium accumulates it is wound into roundish lumps or irregular flattened cakes of various sizes and put aside to dry. When of proper consistency it is generally wrapped in leaves and sent to market.

Ancient Roman "Racket"

Cicero, reputed to have been the richest man of his time, amassed a great fortune by his ingenious operation of a private fire department in old Rome. When a fire would break out, he or one of his agents would rush to the owner and offer to buy the burning structure at a very low figure. The owner usually would sell for almost nothing to get some salvage. Thereupon, Cicero would call up his fire brigade and, in many cases, put out the blaze. In this way he became owner of a great many buildings. It is hinted by early writers that when business was dull his agents may have had a hand in starting an occasional conflagration.

Woman Suffrage in 1797

Why has it never been imagined that the right of election should be extended to women? Why but because by the law of nations and perhaps also by the law of nature, that sex is dependent on ours; and because, therefore, their voice would be governed by the relation in which they stand in society. Therefore it is, sir, that with the exception of counties in which right of voting merely affects property, it has never been in the contemplation of the most absurd theorists to extend the elective franchise to the other sex.—Charles James Fox in Speech on Parliamentary Reform, 1797.

Newspapers Delivered Free To Every House

why was there such keen interest and whose eagerness was it that spent all the money required for printing and distribution of about 500 free copies of the paper?

It's an old game close observers of county politics recall that prior to the "revolt" two years ago, when supervisors of rural areas and the small towns united and broke the urban control, on the question of tax equalization, it was freely talked that Pontiac city representatives, aided by certain other supervisors, held the whip-hand, using frequently one weapon to hold timorous supervisors of outlying areas "in line." The weapon was the threat of discrediting those supervisors with "the people at home," and causing their defeat at the next spring election.

The laugh however, seems to be on whoever was behind the free distribution of the Pontiac dailies, particularly if it was done, (as it probably was) with the idea in mind that supervisors are to be elected only a few months hence, and that Mayor Lamb's political scalp would thereafter dangle from a hostile belt. For, if they but knew it, Farmington elects its mayor but once in two years, and the election was held only last April. It will thus be a year and a half before they will have their "chance" to "get" the mayor and many things happen and many views change in a year and a half.

Still—500 copies of an 18-page paper makes a lot more paper in town—125 pounds, in fact. The Seniors need it to sell for their Washington trip—and Mayor Lamb's daughter is a member of the senior class, so maybe they "did him a favor" after all.

DEVELOPMENT RAPID

Lansing, Nov. 11—Surprise at the rate of progress made with the national wild life development project in Williamston township, Ingham County, was expressed by a group of distinguished scientists who inspected the three test areas comprising 1,900 acres on which various tree, shrub and grain plantings have been made.

CITY—TOWNSHIP GIVEN INCENTIVE FOR CLEANING UP

Howard Warner Offers To Place
Truck At Disposal Of Officials

An unusual opportunity is presented to both Farmington Township and City, to clean up, and beautify the highways, without cost, at the same time, providing employment to men in need of work. The opportunity is made possible through an offer of Howard Warner, who will place a truck at the disposal of officials for the purpose.

Mr. Warner has a large Packard truck which he is willing to loan the Township or City without charge, with the idea that a driver and helpers could be recruited from among men on the welfare list. Many otherwise beautiful roads in this vicinity are made unsightly, Mr. Warner points out, by littering of cans and other rubbish along the shoulders and ditches. A large amount of brush could also be cleaned from the highways. A dumping-place is available near Pontiac.

The offer of the truck will remain open as long as required, according to Mr. Warner, who will insure it during its use by the Township or City to protect against any mishaps that might occur while it is being utilized.
