Farmington Man First To Head Groups At Same Time

Northville R. A. M. last week, his title being high priest. His term as commander of the Commandery unit will continue until April, the close of the commandery year. For the eight months after that, Mr. Way will occupy two important lodge offices. He is also past master of Farmington Lodge.

How Mr. Way manages to memorize and maintain all the ritual of the three Masonic orders, and more than that, how he keeps them straight in his mind when called upon for long recitals, as on Monday evening at the Farmington lodge installation, is a mystery to his friends. For over an hour Mr. Way conducted the ceremonies and delivered lengthy passages practically without hesitation and in faultless fashion.

Rumor has it that while others attend movies, or play bridge, and even long after they go to sleep, Mr. Way shuts himself up in the basement of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Cook, where he makes his home. There, so 'tis said, he paces the floor into the early morning hours, drilling himself in Masonic discourse. Mr. Way himself hasn't been heard to give an explanation of his own— he merely smiles.
