BAPTIST CHURCH SCHOOL ACTIVITIES MANY THIS WEEK

Mid-Year Wayne Baptist Association Meeting To Be Held January 19

Baptist church and Sunday school activities are numerous this week.

At a business meeting, Mrs. Clifford Young was appointed to the flower committee for the ensuing year.

It was voted that the "birthday money" be given to the Baptist Children's Home in Detroit. This money is acquired in an interesting manner. Each person that has a birthday puts one cent per year according to his or her age in this fund.

The new members of the church will be given the hand of good fellowship on Sunday January 17.

Mrs. A. C. Berlin, Mrs. Lovina Coe, Mrs. Charles Coe, and Miss Helen Mathews attended the Northwestern District Sunday school gathering at Milford on Friday. The meeting was called to talk over Sunday School problems. Interesting papers were read by Mrs. Rice of Novi and Mrs. Rollin Porter of Wixom. The address of the evening was given by Rev. Frank Minor of Northville. His subject was "The Church At Work As A School."

Everyone is urged to attend the Mid-Year Wayne Baptist Association meeting to be held at the Howell Baptist church January 19 for an all day meeting. Noted speakers of New York City and Rev. Henry Erickson who will speak on "Pioneers in the Belgian Congo," and Dr. Ralph Taylor Andem of Lansing, who will give the evening address.

CIVIC WELFARE CLUB CHOOSES NEW OFFICERS

The Civic Welfare Club met at the home of Mrs. George Groll on Wednesday January 6 for a pot luck dinner and its usual bi-monthly business and social meeting.

The election of officers took place at this meeting. The new officers are: president, Mrs. M. Rhodes; vice-president, Mrs. J. L. Taylor; treasurer, Mrs. George Groll.

The next meeting will be a pot luck dinner at the home of Mrs. Glenn Buffmyer, Wednesday January 20 at 12 noon.

MRS. GLENN BUFFMYER ATTENDS COUNTY MEET

Mrs. Glenn Buffmyer, county committee member from this district in Extension work, attended the County committee meeting at Pontiac Friday.

The regular business was transacted in the morning with a luncheon following at the Masonic Temple. In the afternoon the Joint Club held its meeting.

The Joint Club consists of the Boy's Course, Farm Bureau members, the Women's County committee and the Township supervisors. The budget was discussed for approval for the coming year.

M. E. CHOIR VIGS PROGRAM AT NEW HUDSON CHURCH

PERFECT NEW DEVICE

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Flaws of even microscopic size have no chance to pass by the eagle eye of a new inspection device perfected at the University of Michigan, which not only spots an error 1/100 less than one ten thousandth of a second, but remembers it until a complete examination has been made and the faulty product shunted into discard. The mechanical inspection device was developed by Professor Floyd Preston of the University Department of Engineering Research.

EDITORIAL SPOTLIGHT

TELEPHONE A NECESSITY—Parker, S.D., New Era

Because of the general depression and the pressure of hard times, many folks are endeavoring to cut down expenses and about the first thing that comes to mind is the discontinuing of telephone service. It seems reasonable to them that the telephone is one thing that they can easily do without. On the contrary, it is one of the greatest necessities of the day. In case of distress, nothing beats a telephone to summon assistance, whether it is the fireman or physician.

To be suddenly awakened in the middle of the night, facing the emergency of relief for a sick child, or the danger of fire, many valuable moments are saved by turning to the telephone to call for help. In the time it takes to dress and go to a neighbor's home or to a public telephone, a life might be lost or a home burned if the ground is not assistance, which it is the fireman or physician.

The other, Barry Mason, principal of the school where she taught, Mill would inherit thousands. Barry had an invalid mother dependent on him and principalships are seldom stepping stones to a fortune.

In a burst of confidence, she told her mother all about it. "I've been asked to marry me," she confessed. "But I don't know—don't know—"

Her mother, watching Joan's lovely, downcast face, did not wonder that she was distressed by two men.

"Joan," she said suddenly, "why don't you spend your vacation with Aunt Carol? Go away from both these estimable young men and think things out for yourself."

"I'm afraid," said Joan, "that if I do that, I'll surely want Mill. Just a glimpse of that sort of life—"

"As you like," said her mother indignantly.

In the end, Joan went to Boston. She was met at the station by her aunts brown limousine and brown-stuffed chauffeur. She was driven to the solemn brownstone-fronted house in Back Bay; then shown to her room and told by a precise white-capped maid that her aunt would be home at five.

At five promptly, Aunt Carol magnificently furrowed and bowed, came hurrying into the room and took Joan in her arms.

"Your mother wrote me," she said archly, "that you've run away from two ardent admirers. And meanwhile, we must see that you have the finest time."

Not even Sally Arnold, Mill's debutante sister, could have whirled through more gaiety than did Joan in the following days.

Dinners, dances, luncheons, shopping tours, opera—it was a wonder if either Barry or Mill were ever spared a thought.

And yet, lying in the exquisitely draped four poster, Joan's thoughts nightly traveled home. This sort of life would be hers forever if she married Mill. If she married Barry—well, of course, it is absurd to think she would know about poverty or anything remotely approaching it. What she would know would be doing her own household-goods, careful, economy, doing without this to obtain that, and, there should be a family, a constant speculation as to where dentist bills, music lessons and college educations were coming from.

Joan didn't see a great deal of her aunt. Once introduced to the bery of young people that were daughters and sons of her aunt's friends, she was swept along without effort on her part on the surge of various social activities.

It was the last night of her stay that Aunt Carol came into her room as she was undressing before the cozy little fire that burned in the grate.

"Have you settled that momentous question of yours?" she asked with a smile.

Joan shook her head.

"I take it for granted," went on her aunt, "that both are fine young men, and that their incomes being equal—Joan, do you love one of them?"

A rosy flush suffused the sweet contours of Joan's face. "I—I think so," she confessed.

Her aunt came over and laid a hand heavily with a finger ring on Joan's slender shoulder. "Take the one you love, Joan. If it's the rich one—well and good. If the poor one—take him. Life brings hardships and disappointments that only love will withstand. You see, I know." She paused, then went on gravely. "I'm going to tell you a little secret, Joan. I once had the same decision to make that you have. I loved a poor young man and I married the rich one. I haven't been altogether unhappy, but I stepped in to somebody else's life and have never had time to live my own. I'd swap my limousine, house and position in society for a sweet young thing like you yourself and all the joys you are going to bring your mother—a good son-in-law, grandchildren and a learned town and kissed her rosy niece and departed.

Joan's father met her at the station in the old car that had to be cranked before it would go. "Hope it's with the girl parents have spoiled your taste for home, Joanne," he grinned.

"Between you and me, I owe your Aunt Carol a lot. I was once quite sweet on her but she turned me down for a young man with a million. If she hadn't, I should never have got your mother."

Joan said, "Yes to Barry that very evening." "It's love that conquers," she told him gravely. "Life brings many hardships, but only love can withstand. You see, I know."
