EGGS LEADING IN -YIELD TO FARMER. SAYS PROF. SHEAR

Market

Eggs are one of the bright spois in agricultural lines according to Professor. O. E. Shear of Michigan State College who spoke on the "Poultry Outlook for 1938" at the egg show held jointly by the Wixom and Lyon Farmers' Clubs in New Hudson on January 11.
Even if egg production is increased. Professor Shear predicted that present feed prices will permit a fair labor income. He attributed the present low production in many flocks to poorly grown pullets, to poor feed mixtures and to parasites uncontrolled.

ed.

He said, "Present egg prices mean that storage eggs have been profitable for the owner of storage eggs and will undoubtedly he a factor in increasing the demand for eggs for storage purposes next spring which should counterat the extra production of eggs rext spring from late natched pullets."

Extensive Grass Fires In Farmington Area

In Farmington Area

The blackened appearance of much of the open land along Grand River, east of Farmington to Six Mile Road and west of the city for several miles, is due to large grass fires which have occurred during the past week.

Some of the fires were activated appearance of the fires were activated and apread easily because of the dry condition of the grass. Other fires were set by individuals living in the vicinity who feared that the dry grass might offer an opportunity for fires out of control to reach their homes. No damage to buildings, from grass fires has been reported.
