Linger at Stage Doors
for "Closeup" of Stars

Familiar among Broadway's nightgliders are the small crowd that gather near stage doors after the show is over. Usually between the hours of eleven and twelve they are to be found waiting for their favorite star to emerge. They stand with a rather quiet expectancy. Every time the stage door opens they push forward eagerly, only to be disappointed when an over-enthusiastic hand makes his exit tugging a trunk or piece of scenery. When the long-awaited exit door comes out they crowd about, asking questions, bestowing adoration and pushing forward to obtain a better view. Some fans come with photographs to be signed. Others seek a star's autograph on a program while still others want to see what their favorite performer looks like away from the footlights.

Some nights an actor's address is in a hurry and, desiring to avoid the crowd, leaves by a different exit. The stars use various ruses to get away in a hurry, sometimes telling the doorman to notify the crowd that someone will not leave the theater for a few hours.

Telephone Earnings Decrease.
Ratio of net earnings of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company for 1932, to the cost of plant and other assets, was 2.60%, compared with 8.62% the previous year. The company failed to pay $500 to earn the dividends of $2.
50 per share paid on this stock during the year, according to the report of the company's operations for 1932 presented by Birch Forster, president, at the annual meeting of the stockholders held Thursday, February 9.

Too bad that puffed sleeves are coming into style just when bootlegging is going out.
