Actors Stranded, Bus Company Is Fined
three were detained overnight in the City lock-up.
Send For Aid
Meanwhile frantic efforts were made to get in touch with the stage company manager, who had made the arrangements but was not with the performers. After some negotiations, the Eastern Michigan System agreed to send a bus and two trucks, to a reported total price of $270. It was five o'clock when the company went on its way. A considerable Farmington restaurant-owner had obligingly kept his place open for the strangers. A Detroit attorney, however, who promised to come out to aid the stranded ones failed to appear although Judge Schulte waited until after three o'clock for him.
Fines Assessed
The drivers pleaded not guilty, but when tried were found guilty and the bus company was fined $55, including the fine of $10 for the driver. The truck drivers were fined $10 each.
The bus remained in Farmington for several days, parked on Grand River in front of Peoples State Bank.
Junior Club Adopts A New Constitution
The regular meeting of the Farmington Junior Club was held Monday evening at the home of Mr. H. Johnson.
At this meeting the Constitution committee presented the constitution they had drawn up and after a few changes it was accepted by the club.
NEW BOOKS
The "Story of Detroit" by Catharine and "The Founding of Michigan" by C. J. Morgan have been added to our new group of books at the library. We are also very grateful to Sidney Robinson for such a generous gift of boys books given the library.
Cordially Yours,
Mary Kennedy, Librarian.

School Notes
After holding Trenton to two field goals in the first game of the tournament, Walled Lake lost the second game to St. Mary's of Orchard Lake in overtime.
Walled Lake came from behind in the closing seconds of play to tie the score, but were not equal to the task and were losers 29-24.
The basketball girls, their parents and the members of the faculty participated in a banquet on Monday evening. The affair was under direction of Mrs. Harold Wood, director of athletic for girls. Games were played in the gymnasium.

Dear Sir:
I've been away from Farmington a long time, but I continue to read with much interest and no little concern of the heroic efforts the community is making to meet the many problems of the day. The Enterprise is, as ever, my chief source of complete information about the activities of my Farmington friends.
It is my hope that 1933 will bring to you and all the people of Farmington a brighter outlook than that which has resulted from the events of the past two or three years.
Cordially Yours,
S. A. Switzer.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD SATURDAY FOR MRS. BARBER

Active Worker In Baptist Church Dies Suddenly; Burial At E. Farmington
Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. for Mrs. Francis Barber, 75 years old, who died quite suddenly Thursday at Franklin. Burial will be at East Farmington.
Mrs. Barber was an active and faithful worker in Farmington Baptist church. For some time she had resided with Mrs. Gates on Shawansee street. Recently she had lived with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith at Franklin.
Mrs. Barber had no relatives here, but Rev. Elmer W. Palmer immediately began efforts to locate a niece in Detroit.
Services will be held at Heeney Funeral Parlor, with Rev. Palmer officiating. Burial will be at East Farmington Cemetery.

Police Officers Fail Attempt At Entering

Farmington Township police authorities foiled an attempted breaking and entering, when on night patrol their approach apparently frightened away men attempting to enter the A. and P. Store in Clatseneville. Deputy DeVriendt and Constable Gregor found iron bars protecting the windows had been pried clear out of the bricks in which they were imbedded.
No clues were found.

Claude Leach Thrown From Wagon, Injured

Claude Leach, who now lives at Camden, Michigan, was thrown from a wagon on the frozen ground February 27th. He was taken to a hospital where it was found that he was badly bruised.
Mr. Leach will be confined to his home for about a month.

How the Useful Plants Came to Mankind

R. T. E. STEWARD
WNU Service

The Artichoke
THE artichoke is not actually a distinct genus, but is a cultivated form of a plant called "cardoon," which is found wild in Madeira and the Canary Islands, in parts of Morocco, and in sections of Spain, France and Italy. This makes it definitely a species of Mediterranean basin origin. As an "artichoke," the cardoon has not been found outside of gardens, although its cruder wild form is abundant. By an unusual freak of transplantation it has become naturalized on the pampas of South America and has flourished there to the extent of being troublesome.
Ancient writers show little familiarity with the artichoke and its introduction into Italy, even, has been rather recent, according to a writer by the name of Targioni, who declares that it was carried from Naples to Florence in 1466.
That the artichoke may have been developed in the gardens of Carthage, or at least of some north African country, is indicated by the fact that the Barber tribes have distinct names for the artichoke and a cardoon, which is taken to mean that the two forms have been distinguished by them over a very long period of time.
Its cultivation in western Europe is admittedly recent, the first artichokes having been raised in England in 1468, whither they had probably been brought from Italy.
The ancient Egyptians were probably unfamiliar with the artichoke, in spite of the fact that in neighboring countries of north Africa it was a staple. Monument drawings which some have called artichokes are considered doubtful, and there is no ancient Egyptian name. Neither is there a Hebrew name for this vegetable.
Theophrastus wrote that it grew in Sicily, as it does to this day, "but not in Greece."
When the artichoke was carried into Persia is a matter of mystery, but it was raised there before the Hindus of India took it up, as their name is one derived from the Persian word. Early Chinese authors make no mention of the plant.
Although the artichoke is in high favor as a table delicacy in most European countries, it is still relatively a rarity in American vegetable markets and to thousands of people it is a name rather than an actuality. Many who recognize its peculiar form when they see it in a booth have never tasted it. Yet those whose taste for it has been developed claim it as one of the true vegetable delicacies.
