

Small Bank in City Outlasts The Giants

hearing any longer, brought in large quantities of gold were included. They feel, a director said, that they need have no fear of the United—that any bank that could come through the national crisis and going approved of the Federal Government is 100 per cent sound, and they feel this Government license to open is in effect an indirect guarantee of the bank's soundness.

Deposits each day since the bank reopened have exceeded withdrawals, and an interesting circumstance is the large volume of gold being brought in. With the Government having set Friday as the last day for termination of the hoarding of gold, and with confidence restored, the hoarders have been bringing in large quantities of the yellow metal. The receipt of gold in United Savings Bank has averaged $100,000 a day since Tuesday morning.

No "Big" Ambitions

The new and striking position into which the United Savings Bank has been projected by the swift turn of events has not caused a change in the outlook of the bank's leaders. It is today one of the "big" banks in Detroit purely by virtue of its standing, but there is no intention of trying to take advantage of the opportunity. It quite likely could have become a big institution in the sense of size. It will not branch out or attempt to become a colossus of Detroit finance.

For one thing its very smallness has been a factor in weathering the storm. It was small enough so that depositors and officers could know each other well and trust each other, and personal contact can save many a situation that otherwise would be lost. The impersonal attitude prevailing in the huge institutions was absent.

Sound Policies

Other factors contributed, too. The United Savings Bank has remained strictly a savings institution, without the vast expense of a commercial department. In addition to conservatism in banking there has been one other policy that the founders, the late Gov. Warner and Frank B. Leland established. That is, that loans from the bank on real estate mortgages should be repaid on the basis of monthly payments which it is contended is of advantage both to the home-owner who borrows and to the bank. Those who have followed in charge in recent years have clung to this practice. That has worked well is apparent in the very fact that the bank is open and doing business.

Thus a long battle has ended fortuitously, though it does not mean the end of toil. In fact, it brought such a great volume of work that Mr. Slocum has stayed downtown each night to work, remaining long after midnight and staying in Detroit overnight to be up early again next morning and at the task. But it is joyous work that is done with a glad new spirit, and Mr. Slocum's expansive attitude is broader than ever. It's a genuine storybook, "happy ending."

U. M. PROFESSOR WILL SPEAK TO THE WOMAN'S CLUB

Farmington Women Hear Address
On Chinese Painting At Northville

Members of Farmington Woman's club were guests of the Northville Woman's Club, March 10.

Mrs. Alexander Brede of Royal Oak, formerly resident for five years in Nanking, China spoke on Chinese painting.

She emphasized particularly the ancient dignity and poetic conception of Chinese pictorial art, and said in substance: "Most of the work generally known to the western world dates from the Ming Dynasty, or even later. Yet it is the ancient periods which deserve our attention, as all later work is extremely derivative from the inspiration of the early periods."

The westerner is often confused by some fundamental differences in point of view between oriental and western art. In Europe the spectator is imagined to be on level ground.

The Chinese convention lifts him above the earth. The eye leaps to the grander shapes and liberating spaces. The westerner objects to the "thinness" in Chinese painting. Chinese art is "much with little," simplicity, not complexity; the spiritual and philosophical attitude, not realism; nature, not man. Chinese landscape ("Shan Shui—Mountain and Water") comprises the part of earth that lifts, the part of heaven that descends.

"Chinese Art concerns itself with relations rather than with objects. In keeping with Tao's ancient comment, the hollow of a clay vessel alone makes it useful, Chinese painting reveals the value of reserves and silences, and the elements of design the gift of spacing is China's greatest contribution to the world's art."

Mrs. Brede mentioned the names of Lee L. Bushell, Chinese artist, and Raphael Petrucci, Chinese painting many times. Tea and cake was served.

The next meeting of the Farmington Women's club will be held Wednesday, March 22, in the parlors of Salem Evangelical church. On account of important business the meeting will be called at 2:00 o'clock.

Prof. W. D. Henderson of the University of Michigan will be the speaker of the afternoon.

His subject will be: "Fundamentals of character training."

Guests are welcome.

Iva G. Hatton, Corr. Sec.

Squill Rat Destroyer

A county-wide campaign to exterminate rats open on Friday this week as a special feature of the wide distribution of Red Squill furnished at cost by the U. S. Biological Survey. Red squill baits according to K. D. Bailey, County Agricultural Agent, are highly effective against rats and if used according to directions should result in completely eliminating these pests from the farmstead. The ready prepared rat bait is to be available at the Farmington Mills.
