April 10, 1933

TO THE CUSTOMERS OF
THE DETROIT EDISON COMPANY

This is the second of a string of letters intended to get some facts to your attention:

The hard times struck us in the autumn of 1929. We did not foresee the extent nor the duration of the troubles from which the nation now seems to be emerging. For the next fifteen months we continued to build new lines and install new machinery. What was started we finished. The President of the United States asked us to do this, instead of stopping suddenly. He wanted us to keep men at work. We spent on new plant and betterments:

1928—$29,900,000	1930—$21,500,000	1932—$6,700,000
1929—$36,800,000	1931—$11,200,000

Of course, we hoped all along that business would get better. So did everyone else. But all of us were disappointed. The use of our service declined for the first time in more than thirty years. Our sales of electricity were:

1929—2,287,936,540 kilowatt-hours	1931—1,888,954,503 kilowatt-hours
1930—2,063,085,722 kilowatt-hours	1932—1,596,474,389 kilowatt-hours

We did not cut down on service when business fell off. We kept it right up to quality and we intend to keep it so. It would be a saving for us to run four days or three days a week, but we cannot stop—not for a minute. Electric service must be instantly available at all times. Too much depends on it. We have as many men on operative duty as we ever did, because we never had any surplus help. We did quit construction, as building or machinery jobs became finished, and started only a few special jobs.

We have always had faith in the future of the community we serve. Through the World War the enormous demand for electricity had our designers busy trying to keep up. In no other city in the United States was the use of electricity increasing as rapidly as in Detroit in the past 30 years. Now in 1933 we have more plant than we need. Before the depression our judgment was good. We still believe that we will have to build new plants to keep up with the future of this community.
