

AUDITORS CLEAR UP MISUNDERSTANDING ON EATON MATTER

Data Prepared For Township Officials Was Not Delivered

The following letter has been received by Arthur P. Coe, supervisor for Farmington township...

Honorable Arthur P. Coe, Supervisor, Farmington Township, Dear Sir:

Sometime ago Mr. Eaton requested of us that we submit to him data from our audit report...

After contacting the officials of the township for authorization to furnish such information, which was granted, we advised Mr. Eaton accordingly and he called at our office...

We have been advised that it had been stated in Farmington that Mr. Eaton paid a fee, and we assure you that this is not the fact.

Upon concluding this meeting our financial statement for Farmington being ready for delivery to the township officials...

We have since learned that Mr. Eaton apparently violated this trust and retained these reports together with the data compiled for him until after a public meeting in the township...

The above sets forth the facts of the matter and the reason why our reports were not delivered promptly to the proper officials.

Very truly yours, L. Rosenberg

JOE E. BROWN AT HOME IN "ELMER THE GREAT"

It isn't anything out of the ordinary when Joe E. Brown plays baseball, talks baseball, or buys a baseball club, as he did recently.

Several of his pictures have had baseball as integral parts of the plot and background, but he has reached the acme in this degree in his latest First National picture, "Elmer the Great," which comes to the Great Lakes Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

Joe E. Brown in "Elmer the Great"

It is a baseball comedy from start to finish by Ring Lardner and does Joe revel in it, because he simply loves the game!

If all dates back to the days when Joe was 16 years old. Before that time he had joined a circus as an aerialist and then gone into vaudeville. But show business has been in his bone-to-bone since seasons, so Joe was unable to indulge in his nose-to-suppressed passion for baseball during the summer months.

In 1908, then, Joe became a second baseman for the St. Paul team, starting a professional career which was to last eighteen years.

Early every summer he would quit show business and sign up with a ball team, invariably playing second base. Joe admits he was pretty good at it in those days, although he never shined as a big league star.

The majority of his friends today are baseball players, past and present. It was in 1920 when Joe first met Tris Speaker, and this warm friendship which sprang up has continued to this day. At that time, Tris Speaker was playing for Cleveland—and it was the year that Cleveland won the World Series.

While Joe was filming "Elmer the Great," Speaker called him on the phone by long distance and offered him a third interest in the Kansas City Ball Club, which Speaker and Lee Keyser, also owner of the Des Moines club, were buying. Now Joe and Tris are partners.

Put it all together, "Elmer the Great" spells fine baseball comedy.

DONDERO LAUDS WORK DONE BY SPECIAL SESSION

Opposed Arms Embargo, Portion Of Economy Act; Farm Relief Called Outstanding

The great amount of work done by the special session of the 33rd Congress was described by Congressman George A. Dondero, representative of the 17th district, in a recent interview.

Among the more important of the legislative acts, Congressman Dondero listed: 1. Agricultural relief; 2. Home loan act; 3. Banking reform; 4. Industrial Recovery act; 5. Economy act; 6. Reforestation; 7. Railroad reorganization; 8. Muscle Shoals act; 9. Arms Embargo.

Under the agricultural relief legislation are: 1. Farm mortgage relief, which enables the farmer to refinance his mortgage over a 15-year period with interest at 4 and one-half percent. 2. Processing act, an experimental program to readjust farm prices.

Small home owners are given relief under the home loan act which allows the home owner to refinance his mortgage over a 15-year period at five percent. A Detroit office has been opened to receive applicants.

The most popular provision of the Banking Reform act is the guarantee of small bank deposits. More than 1,000 youths from the 17th district have been enrolled in the Civilians' Conservation Corps under the Reforestation act.

Congressman Dondero explained his attitude on the arms embargo, which he vigorously opposed, asserting that he believed the powers which it would grant to the president would be dangerous and could easily throw the nation into a state of war. He also opposed what he called the "harshness" of the Economy Act.

TENTS DISAPPEAR

Lansing—Tents and essentials of camping equipment, are being gradually replaced by so-called "house trailers," in the state parks according to the Parks Division of the Department of Conservation. More house trailers are appearing in the parks camping grounds every season. They vary from crude home made vehicles to expensive manufactured houses on wheels having every convenience of a home, it was stated.

NO MONEY IS SAVED BY TRUCKING STOCK

East Lansing—Reasons why shipments of livestock by truck have been increasing in the past few years in spite of greater transportation costs than shipments by rail are presented in a bulletin just published by the economic department at Michigan State College.

Farmers ship livestock by truck because it is more convenient even when it costs more money and when the shrinkage of stock on long hauls is greater. However, livestock shrinkage on short hauls is less on truck shipments than on those sent by rail.

Of the livestock receipts at the Detroit yards, shipments by truck increased from 4 per cent of the total in 1920 to 73 per cent in 1932. Owners truck only 15 per cent of that amount of stock themselves, 35 per cent is hauled by truckers who buy the stock direct from the farmers, and 50 per cent is hauled for hire and consigned for sale in the yards.

As a reminder to the "patronize home industry" disciples, we note that none of the visiting diplomats are ever caught riding on an American boat.

Note Increase In Use Of V-8 For Hauling

Detroit, Michigan—A decided increase in the use of eight-cylinder engines for haulage units is shown in the sale of Ford V-8 commercial cars and trucks in the United States since the first of the year. The increase has been most pronounced during the last two months.

The sales of Ford eight-cylinder commercial cars and trucks during June showed an increase of more than 60 per cent over May. The production schedule for July indicates that of the total four and eight-cylinder units to be produced during the month, approximately 75 per cent will be eight-cylinder types.

WATCH POISON SPRAY ON UNWASHED FRUIT

East Lansing—Stricter regulations made by federal authorities will make it necessary for Michigan orchard owners to modify poison spray schedules or run the risk of having fruit condemned for showing too heavy residues of poisonous substances, according to warnings issued by the entomology department at Michigan State College.

Growers who do not own power washers for fruit will have to change this spraying schedule for the control of codling moths or the market for their fruit will be endangered. Fruit which will not be washed should not receive more than two sprays of lead arsenate. Calcium arsenate may be used in the second cover spray, but any additional sprays should be made with summer oil emulsion.

Three applications of lead arsenate can be used on fruit which will be washed, and calcium arsenate can be used for additional applications.
