Speaks At Exchange

Henry A. Houston, president during 1933 of the Oakland Area Boy Scout Council, spoke on the Scout movement at Farmington Exchange Club Wednesday noon.

TELLS HOW SCOUT WORK MEETS THE NEEDS OF TODAY

"Lord Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement, recently said: 'Give me the cost of one battleship, and I will make war forever impossible.' We say, 'Give us a fraction of the cost of handling criminals, and we will make crime mighty scarce in ten years.'"

"Thus was one of the chief functions of the Boy Scout movement depicted by Henry A. Houston of Pontiac, president during the past year of the Oakland Area Scout Council, for members of Farmington Exchange Club Wednesday noon. Mr. Houston gave a highly interesting outline of the aims and achievements of Boy Scout work in Oakland County and in the country as a whole. He laid most emphasis upon the need for spreading Scout ideals of citizenship in the changing world of this day. His subject was: The Boy Scout Movement and the Changing Social Life."

Mr. Houston said that the Boy Scout movement merely takes advantage of the natural inclination of boys to "gang together," but gets them together for good rather than evil purposes. He said that European countries realize the need for training youth, and are doing it, but are teaching them, "a scorn for religion, intolerance of other beliefs, a hatred of other races, and an unfriendliness to other people."

"Whole nations are being reared up in that attitude," said Mr. Houston. "What a contrast to the creed of the Boy Scouts and similar American movements, which teach reverence, tolerance, consideration for other races and friendliness to other nations."

Mr. Houston was accompanied by Scout Executive Herbert Watson, both men being guests of Joseph Himmelspach.

90 Years Enough, Says Farmington Man Celebrating His Anniversary

He offers no prescriptions for living to the age he has attained beyond one brief Scriptural admonition. He has no desire to live 100 years more and thus reach 100 years of age. He is ready to die today if this time has come. But while he has no great yearning to go on living, even one day longer, he nevertheless takes a keen interest in everything that transpires locally and will continue to do so as long as life continues for him.

The subject is Perrin E. Glidden, one of the oldest citizens of this section, who celebrated his 90th birthday on Thursday of last week at his home on Grand River near Lakeview Drive. Active and alert to what goes on, with a keen wit and barbed shaft to dig a bit into the hide of this or that one (including his friends), Mr. Glidden thoroughly enjoyed the visit of a few who gathered at his home to honor him. His birthday cake he enjoyed as much as a youngster.

The one bit of advice, offered by Mr. Glidden, (for he would object to one's saying he gave a single rule), would be to read and observe the Twentieth Chapter of E. Oduu—the first seven verses. It comprises no lengthy discourse on human behavior, lays down no rigid rules. It offers no detailed course of conduct. But its general and gentle teaching is all we need to guide us alright, in the firm belief of Mr. Glidden.

These Thirty Years Will Be Shown Here

"These Thirty Years," all-star talking picture produced by the Ford Motor Company, will be shown in Farmington soon in the Methodist Community Hall. The picture depicts the development of transportation over the past thirty years, including also a graphic review of business in this country through boom and depression periods since 1903. Running through the story is a captivating romance.

The firm belief of Mr. Glidden, (Readers wondering what the advice is may go to their Bibles, even as did those who gathered 'round Mr. Glidden's birthday cake. Those not having Bibles are invited by him to come to his house and read the well-worn page).

Heard Lincoln
Mr. Glidden heard Lincoln speak, riding all night on his horse to Kansas to hear the Great Emancipator deliver a campaign address. He does not believe that the next 25 years will see as many changes as have the last quarter century. He regards the depression which began in 1929 as the worst the country has ever seen. Things were never so bad for so long a time, he said.

He has seen enough that he is ready to leave the world any moment, he says. Not even the great drama being unfolded in the Roosevelt experiment intrigues him much; he is not particularly interested in remaining to see whether it succeeds or fails, and what is to follow.

But regardless of that, Mr. Glidden enjoys each new day that is given him, found pleasure in cutting his birthday cake, and particularly is delighted when friends and fellow-citizens drop in on him for chat about affairs in and around Farmington, which has been his home for more than a dozen years.

The picture is to be brought to Farmington by Olin Russell, Inc. It is not the usual type of "business promotion" picture, designed to push sales, but a truly fascinating romance. There will be admission charges of 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children, and many taken in by the picture donated to the Farmington welfare committee for charitable work.

The dates and other details will be announced next week.

A PROFIT IS NOT WITHOUT HONOR

(Reprint from the Saturday Evening Post, Nov. 11, 1933)

"Profit" comes from the Latin word for "progress."

In no other country has the profit principle created so much progress—so much material prosperity—as in the United States of America.

Yet here and there are men who seem to think that profit is wrong in principle—that all service and all production should be offered without profit. But most farm products and most manufactured goods in recent years have been offered not only at cost, but at less than cost. There has been little profit, and less progress. Who has benefited?

In 1932, like most other business, the motor car industry operated at a net loss. Individual makes of cars, in many cases, were sold at hundreds of dollars less than cost of production per car.

If the principle of "selling without profit" is sound economics, motor car manufacturers should have been flooded with orders. But they were not. Wonderful bargains were offered far below cost. Yet few people bought. Absent profits meant absent wages and salaries—absent jobs—absent purchasers.

Profits are the key to permanent business recovery. Governmental leaders recognize this fact. Labor leaders acknowledge it.

So, when you are urged to buy goods or services "at cost" without agent's commission, "without profit," are you really being asked to act in your own best interest?

Surely in your own daily life you have found that "A Profit Is Not Without Honor."

You find, too that your own home town business-men are most reliable and can serve you best. When tempted to buy out-of-town, by such bait as the phrases mentioned above, reflect seriously before you buy. Remember that when you patronize a home business, home industry and home professional men, at fair prices, and enable them to make a profit, then they can pay YOU a profit and their employees can pay YOU a profit and EVERYONE benefits.

When you are led astray by a false mirage of a supposed "saving" you deprive yourself as much as you do your home town fellow-citizen.

Think it over and you will keep your dollars at home.
