Kenneth Loomis is in charge of ticket sales, and urges that because of the short time remaining, tickets be bought as soon as possible. The tickets are 50 cents a couple, including refreshments. Individual tickets are available for ladies at 25 cents. Several business-men of Farmington are assisting Mr. Loomis in selling Farmington quota of tickets.

Owning Your Own Home

I have often wondered why it is that there are so many renters in the world. I know a family of four, who have lived in a different house or apartment every few years since they first set up housekeeping, and their children are now grown. It is a family which loves its home, too, and has made it make it attractive. They take a pretty house in the suburbs and decide to "try it out for a year," and then if they like it, perhaps try to buy it. They spend much time and energy in making it homelike within and without—and then along comes some one who takes a fancy to it and buys it right out from under them! They have to move on, either to another house in the suburb, or to another suburb, where they "try it out" for another lease-year.

This seems very pathetic to me, somehow. The homelessness of living under a roof that is not one's own and which may be removed at any time, makes me sad. What is it that keeps renters eternally renting. Instead of owning? Is it fear of the loan pull necessary, over a series of years, perhaps, to buy the home outright? Or is it a restlessness, inability to decide definitely where one wants to live?

Recently I saw two young neighbors of mine, who had been a charming low-sloping cottage near us, standing arm-in-arm for a long time out on the road in front of their house, gazing at their own home. I thought I knew what was passing through their heads, for they were not talking. This was their roof-tree, their own place on the earth, their own chimney, their front door. Here they would settle into life as their shrubbery had settled into the ground. Here their little family would be reared; here they would be good neighbors and worthwhile citizens—here they would belong!

Of course there are times when renting is not only necessary but wise. We cannot all be in the place where we would be, and in general the contented family is the one that can ignore the "For Rent" columns, and raise hardy perennial flowers one year in the certainty that they will be there the next year to see the plants bloom! Reveals Crocodile's Age
Even the big-game hunters of Africa, most of whom are deploring the disappearance of the country's game, have little to say in defense of the crocodile. They are vicious and destructive and valuable animals are liable to wander within reach of a "croc" without observing the latter's presence. Buffalo cannot escape. They are caught in the great jaws and dragged under the water and their bodies stocked in a "larder" under the banks until such time as the crocodile is in need of food. The stories of their long life is questioned by some but in the interior of one killed was found a bead of a kind not seen in the protectorate for at least 150 years; it was one of those used by the Stuart companies to barter for ivory, gold and slaves. Some indication of age!

SENDS GREETINGS FROM THE FLORIDA BEACHES

From the bathing beaches Miami Beach, Florida, Clarence Aldrich sends his friends in Farmington picture postcards showing crowds of bathers sunshine, water, and warm sands, in mid-winter.

Clarence didn't say whether the cards were just friendly greetings or whether he wanted to make stay-at-homes envious.

We don't blame Mary Pickford for deciding to divorce her Doug. How she could stand for the smirk on that pan of his as long as she has in one of the enigmas of modern times.

No Devaluation Here

President Roosevelt may lower the GOLD content of the dollar, and if he's for it, O. K. He's a great man and he'll pull us through.

But there's one cut even the President couldn't make. Not even Roosevelt could make us lower the GOOD Content of the Meats we sell. Not only must the Meats we buy for you good, they must be THE BEST. We're keeping up to the same old standard, not gold, not just Good, but THE BEST!
