

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. BELLARD
Director, Bureau of Health Education
New York State Department of Public Education

Health Protection

The opening of schools means the congregation of large armies of children into groups. This means that the chances of disease contagion are greatly increased, especially for children entering school for the first time.

To offset the danger, there are the following procedures which every parent and teacher should support: (1) Abolish competitive attendance devices and rewards. (2) Let every parent promise himself to keep his child at home upon the first appearance of any ailment, complaint, sign or symptom. This measure alone would prevent much misery and illness. (3) Enforce immunization as a routine procedure. This includes vaccination against smallpox and second injections to prevent diphtheria. Undoubtedly we shall soon accept similar measures against other communicable diseases. (4) The morning health inspection by the teacher during the first five minutes of the session. (5) Immediate exclusion from school of every child showing any departure from normal. (6) Support the health authorities in asking that all children be given a test to determine the possible presence of tuberculosis. (7) School-qualified interested physicians, employed by the board of education. School activities will be the subject of Dr. Bellard's next article.

Have Jealousy Cure

Medical science has until recently regarded jealousy as a defect of character that is incurable. Psychologists have now come to the conclusion, however, that jealousy is a disease, with the same general characteristics as other diseases. Jealousy is a mixture of fear, envy and weakness. It is just as uncontrollable as love, which comes and goes without any conscious effort of will. The only difference between love and jealousy is that whereas love is incurable, jealousy can be treated by means of psychotherapy. The basic cause of jealousy is discovered by means of exhaustive psycho-analysis and after that a complete cure can be effected in most cases. The jealous person is given hormones and is otherwise treated in the same way as a chronic diplomate.

HOPE IS INCREASED

The treatment of oil wells with acid for the purpose of increasing production was developed in the Mt. Pleasant field of Michigan in 1929. Acid is now successfully used in oil fields throughout the nation and in some foreign countries. It has resulted in the coining of a new word "acidizing."
