Homemaker's Corner

Home Economics Specialists

These brisk days thoughts of clothes for the fall, and especially what numbers of last winter's wardrobe can be made over to serve another season.

Proper equipment, placed in easy reach of the worktable, is very important in producing a good-looking garment, according to home extension clothing specialists of Michigan State college.

The work basket should include a pair of sharp shears made of good steel. It is poor economy to buy cheap shears that require frequent sharpening. Dull shears often cause serious slips in cutting, besides being very difficult to handle. The seven-inch size is the smallest that could be used for dressmaking.

Choose a thimble which fits the finger and is not sharp on the edge. If the thimble is too tight it will be uncomfortable, and if too loose will require extra moments to recover when it slips from the finger.

A good tape measure, sixty inches long with numbers on the start at each end on opposite sides, is an indispensable piece of sewing equipment. Plenty of pins should be available. The steel variety is preferable, because they will not leave rust spots on the material. More than one needle will eliminate the necessity of changing threads. An assortment of needles between sizes five and ten is suggested.

A few more of the indispensables are tailor's chalk for marking woods, a tracing wheel of the best steel, a pin cushion. Other essentials are a rule or yard stick, a light, smooth iron, well padded ironing board, pressing cloths, sleeve-board for homemade substitute made of odds and ends of cloth stuffed tightly into a bag or container the size of a sleeve), a sewing machine, and if possible a dress form, and a full length mirror.

Don't Go Through Another Winter With That Wasteful FURNACE COIL

Many women tolerate the bother and inadequate supply of warmed water from various makeshift means in summer because they believe their furnace coil gives them FREE hot water in winter. This is an expensive notion, because engineering tests show one out of every five shovelfuls of fuel burned in a coil-equipped furnace is used to heat the coil. What is 20% of your winter's fuel bill? Can you afford "coil-heated" water?
