LESS IMPORTANT THAN LIFE

(Kankakee, Ill., Republican News)
An intercollegiate football season is always confusing, and with teams that aren't supposed to be so hot rising in perverse might and smacking back the ears of the supposed world-beaters. But the most painful confusion comes from the sports writers who don't seem to know whether they are describing a football game or a segment of the world war.

On a recent Saturday the football teams of Ohio State and Notre Dame Universities met in Columbus, Ohio, and to read what some of the sports writers had to say about it next day you'd imagine that for deathless heroism and supernatural feats of courage and valor a combination of Leonidas at Thermopylae, Custer's last stand, and the Angels of Mons.

Hearken to some of the wordage from frenzied typewriters:
"Noire Dame came out of the maw of hell to beat Ohio State today."

"The maw of hell, eh? Isn't this football business supposed to be a game?"

Or are they playing it with hand grenades and liquid fire nowdays? "A great Notre Dame team that Rockne would have loved, a team that could rise to magnificent, incredible heights of courage, joy, and glory down the Scarlet Scourge..."

"Be with us today, Rockne! Be with us today!" And Rockne was there."

"The 'Scarlet Scourge,' (seriously) what have we here, anyhow—reincarnation of the murderous hordes of Attila and Genghis Khan, or a bunch of likeable American boys playing a game?"

"Incredible heights of courage,"... well, heaven knows that the boys who play football have plenty of the old stomach, and go in and take their knocks with praiseworthy stoicism; but you couldn't use much finer language than that to describe the charge of Pickett's division at Gettysburg.

And about those ghostly visitations: are hysterical writers going to be fanning the shades of the deceased coaches every time a football team wins a game? Where are those shades when their teams lose, anyway?

After all this is a good deal less important, of course, but it is a symptom of a kind of delirium that descends upon the nation every so often, and all things considered it really isn't very good for us.

College football is a game. It is played by a group of boys who like to get a little sport in their spare time while they are getting an education (that's the theory, at least) and it is somewhat less epoch-making and world-shaking than battle, murder, and sudden death.

By getting ourselves all wound up to a candle-dance of emotion and strutting the landscape with high-powered adjectives, we commit a profound injustice to the boys themselves. We hand them a false set of values and thereby do our part to handicap them for life. Let's take our football with a little sanity.

WHEN THE DARK ANGEL ARRIVES

(Exchange)

The motor vehicle is no respecter of persons. Hardly a week passes without newspaper headlines telling of the sudden death of some statesman, industrial leader or other celebrity.

A few recent names on the roster vehicles, comes readily to mind. Not long ago, Col. T. E. Shaw, the famed "Lawrence of Arabia," was killed when he fell from his motorcycle, which he was driving at 80 miles an hour. Only a short time ago the wife of the Secretary of Interior perished when the car in which she was riding at high speed skidded in loose gravel and overturned. Just before, the beautiful Queen Astrid of Belgium met her death—when her husband, driving the roadster in which she was riding, looked away from the highway at a road map, and ran headlong into a tree.

These tragedies become known in a million households, because of the prominence of the victims. But they are no worse, no more tragic, than the thousands of similar deaths which occur annually and make instead of headlines, a mere item on an inside page of the newspapers. Recklessness, carelessness, incompetence—these are the scarlet trifles, which cause so much needless grief, so great an unnecessary suffering, so great an

NEW DANCE PLACE PROMISES TO BE POPULAR

Farmington will have one of the most popular dining and dancing places along the entire length of Grand River road, if the opening Wednesday evening of Jack Crowley's Cafe may be taken as an indication. The new dining spot, located at 29500 Grand River at the east junction of Grand River and the Cut-off, just west of Middle Belk road, was opened with a great deal of an enthusiastic and approving crowd for the opening night.

Fine food is the basis upon which Mr. and Mrs. Crowley, for 11 years connected with Detroit's best dining places, plan to build their business. To this end they have invested a large sum of money in a fine new brick building, fully equipped with the most modern facilities for preparing and serving the best of food. A ten foot stainless steel bar in the dining room and a 22 inch ventilating system which effects a complete change of air through the place every two minutes are two of the striking features.

Decorations in the dining room built to accommodate 60 persons are carried out in two toned walled in four foot wainscoting of that material. The ceiling and upper part of the walls are finished in a stucco effect consisting of three colors: Green, gold and rose. The area on the west side of the structure has been made into a parking lot surfaced with crushed gravel over a space 100 by 40 feet, while the east side is landscaped for a lawn and shrubbery.

The new building, which will be illuminated at night and a concrete walk has been constructed for the patrons from the rear of the building to the front door.

For many years, Mr. Crowley has been planning to build a new place, and his wife have wanted to open a cafe of their own. However, not until about a year ago did they decide on a location after traveling all over the country. It was then that they bought the site on which the present building was erected.

Safety Slogans
According to figures compiled by the National Safety council the highest traffic death tolls are in September, October and November.

The driver of a far should remember that he is responsible for the lives of the others in the car with him.

During the past year according to the National Safety council 15,000 fatal accidents have taken place in the home. The bed room was shown to be the most dangerous place, the living room second, the stairways, the kitchen and the bath room next in order.

Blast Furnace Operates Without Any Shutdowns

The process of smelting ore into metal is accomplished in a blast furnace, the metallic product being a high-purity alloy of iron called pig iron and containing more or less silicon and manganese. A blast furnace, as described by a writer in the Chicago Tribune, is a tall iron more than 100 feet high, cylindrical, brick-lined metal stack in which the ore is melted in the presence of limestone and burning coke. A blast of heated dry air is forced down the furnace. The charge is lit at the bottom. The heat of the burning coke, the more readily to melt the iron in the ore. A blast furnace operates continuously and it is lighted. The charge of ore, coke and limestone is admitted through the top of the furnace, and as it is consumed, it is replenished at regular intervals. In practice a charge of two tons of 60 per cent ore, one ton of coke, and a half ton of limestone, to which four tons of air are added in the blasting process, produces one ton of pig iron, one-half ton of slag, and six tons of gases. The gases are captured and used for various purposes, such as heating the blast. The pig iron drawn off is either cast into pigs (and molds) or poured into giant ladles and carried while yet molten to nearby steel furnaces. The slag or residue of the ore, coke, and limestone, fused solidly into a uniform substance, is drawn off and eventually utilized in making clinker blocks for road building, as roofing material, or for some other similar purpose.

It is hard to visualize the horror of hurricanes and floods, unless you have been in the midst of one.

Lie Detector Inventor To Speak in Detroit

William Moulton Marston, inventor and originator of the "lie detector," now in common use throughout the United States in the detection of crime, will speak on the subject, "Is the Lie-Detector Just?" before the Detroit Town Hall audience in the Fisher Theatre, Wednesday morning, Nov. 27, at 11 o'clock. In connection with his lecture, Dr. Marston will give a 30-minute demonstration of the famous crime-solving apparatus which has been used in the solving of more than 4,000 police cases. Dr. Marston will be introduced by Brig. Gen. Heinrich A. Pickett, commissioner of police in Detroit. When Dr. Marston began his research on his detection in the Harvard psychological laboratory, in 1912, he proceeded on the principle that no normal person can lie without betraying his blood pressure. The more important the lie, the greater the mental effort and the greater the rise in blood pressure. He published the systolic blood pressure deception test in 1917. Immediately the newspapers dubbed it the "lie-detector."

BRIG—As a name of a sailing vessel this term did not come into use until the latter part of the 18th century. It is contraction of the older word "brigantine," from robber or brigand. This was originally a general term for the fast sailing vessel used by the pirates of the Mediterranean.

BOY SCOUTS TO MEET DEC. 6 IN M. E. CHURCH

The Farmington Methodist Church will be the scene of the next Court of Honor of the south-east district of the Oakland Area Boy Council to be held December 6. Each troop will present a number.

Plans for the meetings of the first two months in 1936 are also under way. On January 16 Joseph Himmelspach of Farmington will be the toastmaster at the annual council meeting at Pontiac. Archie G. Leonard will be the main speaker on the occasion.

On February 28 the Boy Scout Exposition of Progress will be held in the Pontiac gymnasium. All troops will take part in the program.

The American Legion home in Farmington was the scene of a dinner meeting held last Friday. It was announced that the southern district, including Farmington and neighboring communities was the largest district in the country. It was decided that a district commissioner and assistant were needed to visit and supervise the district troops.

Leaders present at the meeting included: Joseph Himmelspach, district chief and Rev. F. A. Leonard, F. C. Wellington and G. K. Checketts of troop 45, Farmington; Carl L. Smith and Carl Smith, troop 41, Farmington; Charles W. Sullivan, Arthur A. Ruby and Isaac Bond, troop 48, Bond School; L. B. McLaughlin and Smith Green, troop 47, Walled Lake; Robert H. Erwin, troop 49, Clarenceville; and Herbert N. Watson, scout executive, Pontiac.

The country has suffered the last four months the loss of two of its leading fun makers, Will Rogers and Sidney Smith, the creator of the Gumps. The country can ill afford to lose its laugh producers. In fact, it could use more of them. One laugh producer is worth a million alarm dispensers.

WEST FARMINGTON

Raymond Sealey, Roland Green, James Scharlow, William Knapp and Clair Button went with the agriculture class of Walled Lake to attend a potato show at Mayville. The boys reported it to be an interesting trip.

About 100 people attended the North Farmington Auxiliary at West Bloomfield Town Hall Tuesday. A chicken dinner was served. Mr. August Schuchler is confined to his bed on account of illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bourgeois, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bachelor, Mr.

and Mrs. Starr Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Knapp, Mrs. Edith Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heikler attended a surprise party in honor of Mrs. Mary Bachelor's birthday anniversary Saturday evening at her home. Lunch was served.

Duffield Bigelow and William Hunt went deer hunting.

William Sealey and daughter Ethel Sealey of Northville spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sealey.

The workman who tries to do no more work than he thinks he is paid for is always overpaid.
