Itally, his potatoes were hollow. Yet within an hour, every man who had farm produce to sell was envirage our hero. For it happened that it had been a bad year of potatoes. Not a produceman on the market had anything too fifer but scrawny, scraggly little ones; that looked as though they had been frozen, and thawed, and frozen again a doren times. But there were Jones great big beaut use, awaiting the housewires' approach. His potatoes were hollow, it is true, but.

Now the lapotatoes were hollow, it is true, but.

Now the lapotatoes were hollow, it is true, but.

Now the lacute shoppers. And so after they turned up their noses at the potatoes offered by others and approached our Mr. tones, they splect his lovely large offerings with delight—but quickly their experience gave them pause. "What beautiful potatoes you have:" they would exclaim, "but are they hollow?"
