Mittens and Men

(Christian Science Monitor)

Knitting at the dinner table has been barred at Grinnell College. The click of needles, the women's self-government board declared, had a demoralizing effect on the part of table conversation. And well it might.

Knitting is a subtle thing. The blue beret or scarlet sweater which so miraculously to the masculine eye—takes shape with so little apparent effort is a long way from being all there is to knitting. That is why men miff it so conspicuously. Oh, of course, there are men knitters. Much to the great amusement of the fair sex. For the masculine manipulator clumsily thinks he is knitting just because he conscientiously turns out a pair of mittens.

What every woman knows is that the least part of it. With her, knitting is a highly developed form of self-expression. "Demoralizing to table conversation." Why strong lecturers have wilted under the cold disapproval of clashing needles of steel, just as orchestra conductors have "drowned" a singer they didn't like, so the Wednesday Woman's club's fast and furious knitting has been known to send the rash professor tactfully scurrying when woman's place is in the home.

"Tend to your knitting" was never necessary as an admonition to the slow-fingered male essaying the art. Poor creature, that's all he can attend to. Not for him the graceful nonchalance of feminine knitting fingers whose owners chat on every subject grave and gay. Though apparently the "Betsy Co-Eds" of Grinnell are made of sterner stuff. When they knit the only yarns that interest them are those of wool. Less earnest was the lady in Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia."

Knitting and without singing, and it seemed that her voice comforted her hands to work. But the "gentle and virtuous" poet-knight lived in the sixteenth century. At Grinnell we are assured 250 girls knitted so hard that they left off talking. Honestly!

Tips to Drowsy Drivers

(Dearborn Press)

If you have trouble keeping awake while driving your car, tense your muscles and grip the steering wheel tightly. That safety suggestion, developed from laboratory tests, is reported by Dr. Donald A. Laird, eminent psychologist, in an article in the Rotarian magazine.

"There is more widespread need, however," he adds, "for knowing and acting upon the complementary fact, that relaxation of both body and emotions is essential for going to sleep and for getting sound sleep."

Among his suggestions for avoiding lumberless nights are these:

"Since our skin sensations remain awake except in the most profound sleep, we must watch to keep our sleep from being disturbed by them. Night garments which weigh the shoulders exposed to the chill air make sleep lighter, because temperature sensitivity remains through practically all sleep. And those garments which are constricted at one point or another also disturb sleep. So do garments which are made of any material which has a tendency to cling."

"Beds which have lumps that press unevenly against our bodies," Dr. Laird warns, "cause loss of sleep. Watch for these especially if your springs and mattress are more than five years old, and, most especially if they were low-priced, ones to start with."

A bed can be too warm, as well as too cold. Work not yet completed in the laboratory suggests that the best bedroom temperature is between 55 degrees and 60 degrees Fahrenheit. "Our stomach does not sleep at all," he continues, "it just rests slightly. A bedtime lunch of foods which will not cause digestive distress is helpful in improving the first half of the night by postponing hunger contractions. Crackers and milk or corn flakes and milk are excellent, especially the cereal which can be eaten with less milk."

"The most widespread and in-judicious disturber of sleep, however, is residual excitement from the previous day and evening. A few minutes of deep breathing in front of an open window will work wonders to cool off both body and mind. A tub bath with water from 95 degrees to a 102 degrees Fahrenheit, staying quietly in the tub for five minutes or longer, will also help in eliminating such excitement.

"We can avoid some poor sleep by 'letting down' before we go to bed. That it becomes a difficult task. We should rest before we become exhausted."

Talking About The Weather

(Trenton Times)

There may have been longer periods of severe cold weather than we have had over most of the United States this winter, but few people can remember them, and the weather bureau concedes that the winter, taken as a whole, this has been the worst season in many years. There have been lower temperatures, but seldom such prolonged cold spells and such a succession of cold waves.

The amateur weather prophets and the long-range forecasters are putting forward the usual variety of explanations which don't explain and predictions which are more likely to be wrong than right. A favorite explanation for unusual weather conditions is that sun spots have something to do with them. But the theory that the 11-year cycle of sun spots affects terrestrial weather is not generally or unfavorably, has not been borne out by the records of the weather bureau, which have been kept continuously in all parts of the United States since 1871.

Some weather prophets are beginning to predict that 1936 will be like 1848, which used to be referred to as the "year without a summer" in the northern states. Another school of thought holds that a severe winter is always followed by a hot summer. The fact is that nobody knows enough about the weather and the causes of its violent changes to forecast it for more than a few days or so ahead. Nevertheless, the weather is always has been and always will be the most interesting common topic of conversation.

Stupidity of Crime Revealed

(St. Clements Monitor)

A pair of young men from Peekskill, N. Y., set out the other day to make underworld big shots. They equipped themselves with a revolver, hummer and a side arm. They were accompanied by a man named St. Clair, eminent psychologist, in an article in the Rotarian magazine.

"There is more widespread need, however," he adds, "for knowing and acting upon the complementary fact, that relaxation of both body and emotions is essential for going to sleep and for getting sound sleep."
