"PREBAIT" RATS BEFORE FEEDING THEM POISON

Feeding rats good food for several nights before attempting to poison them is a subtlety recommended by the home economics extension service at Michigan State College, East Lansing.

"It is a good idea to 'prebait' them, that is, use various mixtures without poison for a night or two, and then set up poison stations where the rats are known to feed and live in and around homes and barns," department members said.

Poison mixtures should be varied because rats become wary of any one food. Bait may be spread on small round cardboard or put into paper bags with the tops tied. All food should be kept in secure containers and the greatest care is urged that nothing attractive to rats is left about. Pets should also be kept out of the way when the poison mixtures are used, although the poison is not fatal to them.

Three mixtures recommended by the department are: one ounce red squill over-dried powder, 15 ounces lean hamburger meat, one ounce corn meal; one ounce red squill, 15 ounces salmon or mackerel; one ounce oatmeal; one ounce red squill and 15 ounces cornmeal. The dried powder should be mixed with the cereal before adding the meat or fish. Sufficient water should be used to make it sticky.

Power to Impeach
To impeach a public officer is to bring accusations of crime or misdemeanor against him and call him to account before a competent tribunal. Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution gives the house of representatives the sole power of impeachment and Article I, Section 3 gives the senate the sole power to try all impeachments. Andrew Johnson was the only President to be impeached by the house of representatives; he was tried before the senate but acquitted as less than two-thirds found him guilty.

PRODUCE THE BODY

By BARBARA BENEDICT

LAST week I walked into Charley Floyd's office and found his secretary, Phylla Alsworth, holding the fort.

"Charlie stepped out for a couple of days," she said, without smiling. "Will you wait, or shall I tell him you called?"

I was not annoyed. Charlie is apt to step out for a couple of days or a couple of weeks. I was used to not finding him in. Besides, the offer of an opportunity for which I had been hoping a long time.

"Phylla," I said, sitting down, "I have been considering writing a story about an artist's agent. I wonder if you'd mind if I asked you a few questions?"

"Every one else does," said Phylla. "Answering questions is the best thing I do."

I smiled. Unless you know Phylla she is apt, sometimes, to give a wrong impression.

"Being an agent," I went on, "for some of the country's leading actors, must be interesting work. I mean you must meet a great many interesting people. I have always thought that it is really the agent who deserves much of the credit for the success of a number of big artists."

Phylla sighed disinterestedly. "Yeah," she said, "that's so."

I could see that in order to further my own interests I must get Phylla into a different mood. I smiled patronizingly. "And, of course, the agent's secretary must also play an important part. By the way, what are your duties, to be exact?"

Phylla frowned and rested an elbow on her desk, cupping her chin into her hand. "My job," she said, "is to produce the body."

"I beg your pardon," I said faintly, fisted by her levity.

"Well, it's like this," said Phylla, "I suppose you've heard of Wilbur Gage?"

"One of the finest actors on the screen today," I agreed heartily.

"He's one of Charlie's finds, isn't he? Now, that just goes to prove what I was saying. If it weren't for Charlie, Wilbur Gage—"

"It's like this," Phylla interrupted, repeating herself and stifling another yawn. "Wilbur Gage is just one of many. Charlie has him on a contract, and Charlie also has a contract with Best Films, Inc., for Wilbur's services. When Best Films has a spot for Wilbur they call us, and we in turn call Wilbur and advise him to be on the lot at such and such a time. Then my job, calling actors like Wilbur."

"Very, very interesting," I said. "I had no idea that it worked that way. Quite simple, isn't it?"

"No," said Phylla. "It isn't simple. There's a catch in it. It's a clause in the contract. It states that if Wilbur isn't on the Best Films lot at the designated time, our contract with the company is null and void."

I was puzzled. "But why shouldn't Wilbur be on the lot—if you've tended to your part? I mean, calling him."

"Better men than you," said Phylla, "have asked that same question, and gone begging for an answer. Anyhow, that little item of responsibility is included in my duties. Sometimes it gets me down."

Like yesterday. Yesterday Mr. Melrose of the Best Films called up and said they wanted Wilbur on the lot at ten o'clock this morning. Which was just dandy, as it was then noon. Charlie had stepped out for a couple of days, hence I couldn't depend on him.

"Well, it was either get Wilbur there or lose the contract. I called there, but of course he wasn't there. The man who answered said he was down at the Beach club. A call to the Beach club revealed the fact he'd just left with friends for Lake Arrowhead. I called Lake Arrowhead and left word with the manager of the Actors' club there to have Wilbur call me as soon as he arrived."

"At four o'clock he hadn't called. I was on the point of giving the club a ring, when Dandy Films called up and said that they wanted Nelson Hardy, another one of our clients, on their lot at noon today. Rather distracting, for Nelson, though somewhat of a ham, is energy and speed like short-neck. I called his house and after a five-minute wait got him on the phone.

Upon learning what was expected of him he became wrathful and indignant. He said, 'I never the next day he said, for a trip to the coast, and nothing was going to stop him.'

"I argued, but it was a losing fight, and at length I hung up. I began to wonder how the matter was being handled."

"Not that Charlie's much of a help at such times; he isn't. And while I was sitting here wishing, I remembered Wilbur Gage. I called Arrowhead again and was advised that the reason Wilbur hadn't called me was because he was in no condition to call anyone. I groaned. I knew the answer to that one all too well for experience."

"It was by now nearing six o'clock. I went home, ate a sandwich and drank a glass of milk. Then I backed my coupe from the garage and drove to the police station."

I lodged a charge against Nelson Hardy. I said he had insulted me and that I wanted him arrested at once. I'd prefer charges the next morning. It cost me to have the sergeant if it wasn't a gag. But he agreed to arrest Nelson and dropped me a large wink to bind the bargain."

"At 7:30 I set out for Arrowhead. It was about a hundred-mile drive over a road that mounts from sea level to 7,000 feet in the last 20 miles. I reached the club at 10:15. Wilbur was going strong. I set his party and saw to it that he had plenty to drink. Otherwise there'd have been no use, as Wilbur is obstinate when fortified with liquor."

At one o'clock they carried Wilbur out to my car. I drove him back to the apartment the next morning. I gave him some breakfast and an eye opener. He complained about his head and I promised to take him to a doctor. At ten o'clock I dumped him out on the lot of the Best Films, Inc., and drove off to the police station."

"Nelson Hardy was having a fit, I quieted him by seeing to it he got his party and saw to it that he had plenty to drink. Otherwise there'd have been no use, as Wilbur is obstinate when fortified with liquor."

Education
The term "education" has had various definitions, more or less satisfactory. It is agreed that nothing can be described as educational which is mere acquisition of information that leaves unchanged the individual's approach to a new problem. Educated people usually are able to find their way unaided through the study of a subject to a satisfying conclusion. Education improves the individual's ability to conduct a search for validity.

Peanut, Burrowing Bean
The peanut, is often called the burrowing bean, because after the flower fades the plant stems bend over from a height of about 18 inches and, like an ostrich hiding his head, bury the pods in the ground to mature. In the late summer and autumn the nuts are dug, and then dried in piles of stacks for four to six weeks. Threshing machine remove the pods from the vines.

OLD FAITHFUL

Comes Indoors

Old Faithful, the geyser that has built up quite a reputation out West for dependability, moves indoors with the introduction of a new hot water service now provided electrically for the home. This new service surpasses anything ever before achieved in a constant supply of hot water. At any minute of the night or day, you need only turn a faucet, and you have hot water always on tap. Summer and winter, year in and year out, hot water is provided AUTOMATICALLY . . . without attention.

Most people do not realize to what extent the liberal use of hot water can add to the efficiency of home-making. Here are a few hints on how to make your housework easier and pleasanter:

Rinsing dishes with very hot water, and then letting them stand until dry, actually leaves them cleaner than wiping them with an ordinary dish towel. ☆☆ Certain fresh fruit stains can be effectively removed from table linen by stretching it in embroidery hoops and holding it under the running faucet. Stains from coffee, tea, and various fruits yield readily to hot water. ☆☆ When you wash windows, mirrors or glassware, add a little starch to the hot water. Starch helps to remove the dirt, and gives the glass a brighter polish.

Stop in at any Detroit Edison office and let us give you complete information—without obligation—on electric water heating.
