"KIN" IDENTIFY MAN; PRINTS SHOW MISTAKE

Identification by fingerprints has almost ceased to be news, it is so commonplace.

But when whorls and twirls on the fingertips of an unidentified man upset the funeral plans made by members of a family after their identification, that finds a place in type.

The Michigan State Police completed making a fingerprint record of an unidentified man in an Owosso morgue recently as a couple were brought into the grim room. They identified the man as an uncle.

Instead of considering the mystery of identity solved, the state trooper telephoned the identification bureau at East Lansing and reported the classification reading. The preliminary check there indicated the man to be a former Eaton county resident and not the "uncle" that had been identified.

Another "nephew" living in Owosso was called. He, too, identified the man. As the family went into consultation on the funeral plans, the fingerprint man again called the state police bureau. He began checking his print card with the card of the Eaton man before the fingerprint expert in the bureau. They completed the first telephone fingerprint identification made in Michigan police history. It positively established the identity of the man, not as the "uncle" of the Owosso family but as the former Eaton county man whose prints had reached the state police through a minor arrest record made several years ago.

RECOMMENDS THINNING IN FARM WOODLOTS

Woodlots on farms in Oakland county eventually can offer higher quality sawlog material if a systematic thinning is practiced in second growth areas over a period of years, says County Agricultural Agent Earl D. Bailey.

W. Ira Bull, extension forester on the staff of Michigan State College suggests that the wood obtained from the thinning process is worth while in itself "to keep the home fires burning" and often will be more than enough for fuel for home consumption.

In a second growth woods, according to Forester Bull, where trees range between two and eight inches in diameter there will be perhaps 500 to 600 trees to an acre.

In the first thinning this may wisely be reduced to 300 selected trees. This permits the remaining trees, left because of better formation, to receive more sunlight and grow much faster.

Another improvement cutting can be planned in 10 or 15 years reducing the number to 150 trees while the final stand may contain only 60 or 75 mature trees of high quality for sawing. In the meantime, sprouts from stumps will take the place of the mature trees and may be selected for succeeding timber cuttings.

When the thinning is being done, several ladies of the Farmington Baptist Church attended the annual Christmas party, on Tuesday afternoon of the Detroit Missionary Union at the Grand River Avenue Baptist Church.

advises Bull, the trees to be taken out include the crooked, decayed and bushy topped individuals. Crooked or short trunked trees make good firewood but when used for saw timber they produce more sawdust and slabs than lumber, while bushy topped trees usually contain but one log of interior quality.

Larro
EGG MASH

More Extra
Eggs
MORE PROFIT.

A ton of Larro Egg Mash will feed about 50 hens for a year. Suppose it makes each hen lay only one extra egg per month. (It will actually do much better than that.) But suppose they lay only one extra egg. That's 50 dozen extra eggs for the year from the flock . . . and at 30¢ per dozen those eggs mean $15.00 extra profit for you from only one ton of Larro Egg Mash.

Larro Egg Mash may cost a little more than your present ration—but don't let that hinder you from feeding it when one extra egg per month from each hen will cancel a $15.00 difference in cost.

We know you'll make more money if you feed the Larro way.
