

Early Shoppers Find Many Christmas Gift Suggestions

"That 'time marches on' and that Christmas is fast approaching is evident to readers of The Enterprise this week, who will find many valuable suggestions on holiday gifts throughout the pages of this week's issue.

The Kenn Loomis Hardware is offering something new to its patrons in the form of "plump" lamps for the home. At Spring Brook Gardens are many floral gifts which will find a welcome reception in any home.

Pat Quilman, manager of the Redford Appliance Shop, is offering free delivery service to all of his patrons. His shop, catering to rural service, will deliver to customers as far as Novi.

Sports goods of all kinds are being shown at the Dickerson Hardware. There are sleds, skis and toboggans that will be appreciated by the young sportsmen in the family. Beautiful Christmas cheer is being distributed by the Farmington State Bank this week in the form of $3.50 in Christmas Club savings.

Flowers for Christmas gifts are suggested by Nick Bos, who offers a large assortment of cut flowers and potted plants. Jewelry in the latest mode is being shown at the Redford store of H. Von Burg. A 1937 Chevrolet being shown at the Blackless Motor Sales provides a combination of comfort and economy in addition to smart styling. Electrolux refrigerators are suggested for Christmas gifts by the Consumers Power Co.

In the display room of Olin Russell the new 1937 Ford V-8, with choice of 60 or 85-horsepower motors, is now being shown. The question of what to give "her" will find a ready answer at the store of Fred L. Cook & Co., where many gift suggestions are being shown.

Christmas ranges, with many conveniences, may be found at the Farmington office of the Detroit Edison Co.

Hatton's Farmington Hardware is offering gift suggestions for the whole family, sleds and toys for the children, household utensils for the wife, and many gifts for the man of the house.

Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Graham and family of Dearborn were guests of Rev. and Mrs. Gilbert Miles on Thanksgiving Day. Margaret Miles returned with them to spend the week-end with Betty and Ruth Marilyn Graham.

Pre-Nuptial Parties Given Miss McCully

Two pre-nuptial evenings, honoring Miss Geraldine McCully, were held on Wednesday and Thursday.

On Wednesday evening Miss Emily Maas was hostess at a miscellaneous shower for Miss McCully. Places were marked for the honoree, Mrs. Margaret Turner Nelson of Northville, Mrs. Adair Nelson of Garden City, Miss Arlene Fink, Miss Catherine Storms, Mrs. Jerry Lenhardt (Dorothy McCully), Miss Helen Borchert and Miss Helen Shook.

Another pleasant evening was provided on Saturday when Miss Helen Shook entertained at her home at a miscellaneous shower. Miss Geraldine McCully, a bride of December; Miss Arlene Fink, Miss Catherine Storms, Miss Lenna McCully and Mrs. Jerry Lenhardt (Dorothy McCully) were guests.

Many young couples from Farmington attended the dance given by Carl Smith at the Betsworth, Eight Mile and Grand River, Thanksgiving eve.

CHILD'S PLEA TO OPERATOR CALLS AID AS BABY CHOKES

When Mrs. Jane Naughton, Chief Operator at the Pompton Lakes, N. J., central office, answered a line signal recently, she heard the words "I want my daddy!" At first she thought it was just a youngster playing with the telephone. There was a pleading, almost hysterical, tone in the voice, however, which warned her that something might be amiss, and knowing that the call came from the residence of L. V. Hammond, cashier of the First National Bank and Trust Company, she put a call through to him at the bank.

At that time the four-year-old child was too hysterical to be understood, so Mrs. Naughton explained the circumstances to the banker and he hurried home. There he found that his youngest child, one year old, had wedged its head through the bars of its crib and was being kept from choking, she had been unable either to reach the telephone or to summon neighbors. It was in this emergency that the four-year-old son of the Hammonds turned to the telephone.

Coincidence

"AND I'll never speak to you again!" concluded Sally, to which John thundered "Fine" and went his way.

This was the conclusion of one of those little atmospheric disturbances known as love quarrels. They had just drifted into it—sometimes happens. When they came to think it over afterward neither of them could tell just exactly how it started or just why they had been quarreling about; but each was sure that the other had been in the wrong.

Why two people as sincerely in love with each other as Sally and John Harris should quarrel in this absurd manner is hard to say.

Of course Sally and John were very miserable after they had thus parted in anger. And just how obstinate they were, too, you can imagine how determined each was that the other should speak first. That there was to be no more speaking between them did not enter the heads of either party to the disturbance.

Sally and John were two obstinate young people. The fact that they were very much in love with each other precluded the final yielding of one of them. Among the other desperate things that Sally did in the disturbance of mind caused by her quarrel with John was to buy a small car—or rather she persuaded her father to buy one for her—and to learn to drive at a fashion.

At this stage of the game came Dick Lee. He and Sally were old schoolmates, and she frequently gave him rides in her car. It was Dick's admiration for Sally that he was willing to risk life and limb for the privilege of sitting beside her while she did weird things with the steering wheel. It is just possible that Sally figured that seeing Dick encoined in the car by her side would make John jealous.

As a matter of fact, it did make John jealous; so jealous that, recognizing Dick's peril, he did make the least care what happened to him. He hoped, however, that, in the impending smashup, whenever it should take place, Sally would be hurt. He hoped, however, that, in the impending smashup, whenever it should take place, Sally would be hurt. He hoped, however, that, in the impending smashup, whenever it should take place, Sally would be hurt.

Sometimes it seemed to John as if every noise his engine made kept repeating over and over again. "Sally, Sally!" One day, John came rolling along in his sedan, on an unfrequented highway, and saw the sight of Sally's car have to in distress. Something had gone wrong with it, and Dick and his fair owner were fussing about vainly trying to set it right. John hesitated, stopped, got out and addressing Dick, said: "What's the matter?"

Sally turned her back and gazed at the distant horizon while Dick answered: "I don't know, the blamed thing won't go somehow." John discovered at once what was the matter, did a few things to the mechanism of the car and had it working in a jiffy. Then he entered his own machine and drove on, never once looking back at Sally.

Sally was grievously disappointed that John had not attempted to speak to her. All the way home she berated poor Dick for his ignorance of automobiles and his general inefficiency. And she was thoroughly frightened. Suppose Jack would never speak to her—not even if she spoke first? So to quiet this sudden, unnerving thought she invited Dick out riding the next day.

As John rounded the corner in his sedan on the morrow, he spotted Sally's roadster and it certainly was in a pitiful mood. In court, it seemed it evinced a disposition to climb telephone poles, jump fences and otherwise display an exuberance of spirits quite inconsistent with the safety first idea which John had in mind.

When John reached it, the roadster was hung in midair, after an unsuccessful attempt to jump the ditch. Dick hung limply over the side of the car, and his head crawled in a damaged condition from beneath the wheel.

"Oh, John!" "Oh, Sally!" they cried simultaneously.

If there was something more than just accident about the whole thing—that is if Sally were afraid Jack would never speak, and Jack was afraid Sally might have a wreck and Dick was pretty help—least they never spoke about it. They let it be assumed it was pure coincidence that both preferred the same roads.

But they do say in Jonesville that Dick Lee never again went riding with a girl driver.
