TELEPHONE'S INVENTOR HAD MANY PHONES IN HIS HOME

Every so often a story goes the rounds that Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, ultimately turned against his own invention and would not have a telephone in his own home.

This is entirely contrary to the fact. Indeed, Alexander Graham Bell was one of the first persons to have his home adequately and thoroughly equipped with telephone service. Dr. Bell had a telephone in every room of his house in Washington, D. C., except his private study and the parlor. So, too, with his summer home in Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia, where he had a private telephone line six miles long from Bras d'Or Lake to Baddeck. He had three telephones in the house there and a telephone in every building on the place, including one for emergencies in the little cabin deep in the woods where he used to go alone for uninterrupted thought.

Carp Is Native of China: Once Served to Princess

The carp is an Asiatic fish related to the catfish, introduced into England in the beginning of the 17th century. It is a fresh water fish with large scales and with no adipose fin, and with a blunt rounded snout with four barbels. Its usual length is 12 to 20 inches, although it sometimes grows larger.

The carp, according to a writer in the Indianapolis News, prefers still waters with a soft muddy bottom in which it buries itself in winter. It feeds on small aquatic invertebrates, insects, and vegetable substances. It is very tenacious of life and will live a considerable time out of water. In Holland it sometimes is kept three or four weeks suspended in a net with wet moss and fed with bread soaked in milk.

The common carp in the United States is abundant in many streams, but is not much esteemed for food. The carp is a native of China and the Far East and probably came into Europe early in the Christian era. In the 16th century it was taken in the Danube and was a costly fish supplied only at the tables of princes. In the 17th century it was cultivated in Germany and France and the remains of ponds still are shown near old monasteries where the monks raised carp. From their efforts in breeding came many domesticated varieties, such as the Mirror carp, or King carp, with very large scales; the Leather carp, with a thick soft skin and few or no scales; the Saddle carp, with a row of large scales down the back. The generic name, Cyprinus, is from the Greek cyprinos, carp. Carpio is the Latin for carp.

Flag of Nova Scotia Is Traced to King James I

Nova Scotia has the distinction of being the only province of the Dominion of Canada, and the first colony of Great Britain, to possess a flag of its own. The flag of Nova Scotia is a silver field with a blue St. Andrew's Cross, a small shield with the Royal Arms of Scotland (gold, a lion rampant red, teeth, claws and tongue blue, within a double tressure flory-counterflory fleure-de-lys red) being placed as an insurrection upon the cross.

It traces its origin to the Charter of Nova Scotia granted in 1621 to Sir William Alexander (afterwards the Earl of Stirling) by King James VI of Scotland and I of England. In this charter the name, Nova Scotia, which is the Latin form of New Scotland, first appeared in contradistinction to Acadia or the Acadie of the French. The flag used is derived from the royal coat of arms granted to Nova Scotia in 1625 by King Charles I of England, the son and successor of James VI. This ancient and beautiful armorial is the oldest of all the arms borne by the British dominions.

ADVERTISEMENTS Are Your Guides To Value

Experts can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it, all mean something to their trained eyes and fingers.

But no one person can be an expert on steel, brass, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the material that makes up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch... knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or use of shoddy materials.

This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The advertised product is worthy of your confidence.
