WHO ARE YOU?

The Romance of Your Name
By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

A Bryan?

THE dignity of this name is "elegance or honor," taken from the Gaelic word "brí" and people in every generation and country who have borne the name have lived up to the responsibility imposed upon them.

There were many Bryans to come to this country during the early days of colonization and also in later periods. Most of these settlers were Irish but there is record of one Alexander Bryan who came from England and settled in West-town, Mass., in 1603. He first located in Milford, Conn. where he served as governor's assistant.

George Bryan (1730-91), son of Samuel Bryan, of Dublin, Ireland, settled in Philadelphia. He was a prominent figure in the Revolutionary period, being an active member of the Stamp Act Congress, chief lawmaker of Pennsylvania and father of the Pennsylvania constitution of 1776. He was an ardent agitator of the emancipation of the negro slaves; served as president of the executive council and justice of the Supreme court.

There were also Irish Bryans who were descendants of the nobility, living in Virginia earlier than 1700.

Also Joseph Bryan, of England, who married Jeannette Cochran and came to America in 1700 and settled in South Carolina. There are many descendants of these Bryans in the Southern States today.

No attempt is made to connect the lineage of the families given in so short a sketch but it is probable that they were remotely related.

There have been many Bryans in public life in recent times, who have and are still maintaining the "dignity and honor" of the family name, both in their private lives and in public achievement.

The late William Jennings Bryan, one of the best known public figures of modern times, was a worthy bearer of this splendid name; a living exponent of the Bryan motto, "Foris et Fideles."

The arms shown above were granted to George F. Bryan, of Albany, N. Y., in 1570.

Tremendous Trifles

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ORDERS ARE ORDERS

SIR FERDINAND GORGES was a colonial promoter and his greedy eyes looked across the sea to the New world. He would send a colony there.

The earl of Warwick agreed to be Sir Ferdinand's partner. Both gentlemen had heard rumors of a group in Leyden who were eager to be sent into America. This group had already purchased and manned the Speedwell and were also buying the large three-masted vessel named the Mayflower. The two titled schemers thought that there was a ready-made colony for them.

Sir Ferdinand placed his own captain on the Mayflower. The man was one Mr. Jones, an ex-convict. His patron had rescued him from jail and he was ready to take orders. The Mayflower left London late in July 10, 1620, to go to Virginia—or so their passengers thought. The ex-convict had other orders from his master. Twice the Speedwell sprang a leak and twice put back for repairs. Members of her crew later confessed that they had deliberately caused the damage because they knew the vessel was headed for New England.

Finally, in September, the Mayflower sailed. After a perilous trip land was sighted, but it was not the Virginia coast that the passengers' patrons had promised. The Pilgrim leaders insisted that Captain Jones take them southward, but he refused and headed for the dangerous waters of Cape Cod. Sir Ferdinand's orders were original.

HOLDS COMMITTEE MEETING OVER CONFERENCE CIRCUIT

When an important matter arose recently in connection with the work of the New York Board of Trade in which action could not be deferred, telephone conference service was called upon, and so successful did it prove that it has been decided to adopt it as a regular feature of the work of the Board.

To call this meeting held by telephone, an executive of the Board gave the telephone operator the names and telephone numbers of the men wanted. At 1:15 P. M. each man's telephone bell was ringing. There was a chorus of "hello's." The Chairman informed the nine other men that this was a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the New York Board of Trade. The roll was called and the voice of each man was easily recognized as he answered "present."

One man announced his name and made a motion. Another man seconded the motion. Before the vote was taken, an opportunity was offered for discussion. When the motion was unanimously carried, another motion was similarly passed, and the meeting was then declared adjourned. The whole procedure occupied about six minutes.

In commenting upon the service, Percy C. Magnus, President of the New York Board of Trade, declared: "It is a great time saver, and money saver and it permits of instantaneous group decision."

Advertising is nothing more than a conversation between yourself and your merchant. He pays for it but it saves you money.

The First American Merchants

Depended on Mouth to Mouth Advertising

They had no better means of advertising. When they told visitors to our shores about its wonders it took three months to carry the news home, and by that time it was no longer news, for something newly exciting happened every day then as now.

Today the merchants of America can tell their news through the columns of newspapers and it is no sooner out of their mouths than it is off the press. You, Mr. Merchant, of Farmington, can use the columns of The Farmington Enterprise as your mouthpiece, and your message will reach the right people in record quick time.
