Burns Named Farmington School Head

Robert C. Burns will be the new Superintendent of Farmington Schools when the fall term opens, succeeding John A. Dalrymple as head of the elementary and high school system of Farmington. At the present time Mr. Burns is Principal of the Farmington High School, a position which he has held for the past seven years.

Taking over the principalship vacated by Mr. Burns, will be Max Thompson who is now teaching the various science courses at the school. Mr. Thompson, who came to Farmington last fall, was formerly Principal of the Keego Harbor school.

The announcement of the two new appointments was made by Speaker J. Heenev, president of the Board of Education which made the selection of the two school officials last week.

Mr. Burns was Superintendent of Schools at Pittsford, Michigan before he came to Farmington. He has had 10 years of teaching experience. He has attended seven different colleges and universities, among them being Olivet College, University of Michigan, Detroit Institute of Technology, Detroit College of Law, Wayne University, University of California, and Oxford University in England. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Olivet College, his Bachelor of Philosophy degree from the Detroit Institute of Technology, and his Master of Arts degree from the University of Michigan.

Although he has been teaching several high school subjects while serving in the capacity as principal of the high school, Mr. Burns will devote all of his time to his duties as Superintendent.

It is expected that Mr. Dalrymple will be the subjects of History and Mathematics next year. The remainder of the teaching staff has not yet been selected.

Six Stray Dogs Shot By Officers

Six dogs have been killed in Farmington and many more found running at large will also be shot, according to police officers. In an effort to enforce the 60-day dog quarantine imposed because of an outbreak of rabies.

Another dog is believed to have rabies, the second one in Farmington this far. The first dog found to be suffering with the disease was in the east part of the city and the second one belongs to residents living on Gill Road.

"Public cooperation with the quarantine is very good for the first few days of the ban but during this week there have been a number of dogs running at large within the city," states Deputy Sheriff Joseph DeVrient. "The only thing under these circumstances, is to kill all the stray dogs in order to prevent the spread of rabies. If a dog is allowed to run freely about the city during the quarantine, police have no other alternative than to assume that the dog's owner doesn't care what happens. If it is dog-owners wish to prevent their dogs from becoming infected with rabies or shot as a stray dog, they must keep them at home or on a leash."

One Photo For Two Irishmen—Big Reward!

Is It Jack Daley or Jim Farley? Since last week's issue of the Enterprise was published, with the photo which also accompanies this article, and a story about City Controller John N. Daley of Detroit, dozens of people have inquired of this newspaper that we were wrong. That picture, they declare, was not that of the former Farmington bank receiver who is now City Controller of Detroit, whose name was placed under it, but is actually a photo of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee and political prophet par excellence.

These gentle but emphatic people insist that we must in some way have mixed up two cuts, or that someone "slipped on a banana" but that however it happened, (the subject of that photograph was Farley, not Daley).

Much as we like to gratify those who delight in catching a newspaper in a mistake, The Enterprise must satisfy inform them that they are wrong. The photo was correct—it is Daley, much as he may look like Farley. But it is to be noted that there is between the two men a striking resemblance, closer in photographs than

Light Vote Expected In City Election

Farmington City voters will decide only two contests at the municipal election on Monday. Three commissioners are to be chosen from among five candidates, and a contest exists for office of the justice of the peace.

Commissioners Leo Gildemeter, Emory Hutton, and Harold Oldenburg are on the ballot for re-election, with Bernard Bandfield and Norman Barrons seeking two of their places. Judge John J. Schulte, has an opponent in Howard L. Richards for Justice of the Peace.

It is expected, however, that only a light vote will be cast, and few expect a surprise. The opinion generally is that the present "city fathers" have put the town in the best condition of its history, not only financially, but in all other respects. They only have the big financial deficits and gloomy outlook of a few years ago been eliminated, and the biggest balance sheet accumulated. The city has ever had, but through careful management of the city services, such as street cleaning, water and sewer facilities have been substantially improved and expanded. Meanwhile, taxes have been consistently lowered in recent years and many new residents have been attracted.

Eradicating the general satisfaction is the fact that all other officials of the city, the mayor, clerk, treasurer, and assessor are without opposition for re-election. Fred Bagnall is assured of election as commissioner to fill vacancy, being without an opponent. The same is true of Lloyd Gulien, candidate for justice of the peace; to fill vacancy, and Harrison Johnson and Clinton Wilber, the latter for board of review. The last two named were among the candidates for commissioner who no candidates filled petitions. Clarence Bell and Marie Pettibone are unopposed for constable.
