

Farmington Cut-off Cited in Campaign

Just as eager about cutting down hills as we are straightening curves. You can't see around a corner and you can't see through a hill. They're both curves—only one is tipped up sideways. That's why reducing hills is just as important in our program of building for safety as the flattening of turns."

Honored by 1,000
A thousand Oakland County men and women turned out to honor the County's "favorite son" Monday evening at a "Homecoming dinner" and program in Congregational Church at Pontiac. Over two hundred, some including the Commissioner's close friends, were unable to get in. Practically every official in the State government came down from Lansing to attend. National Commissioner Edmund C. Silsbee, noted State Democrats and all of the Democratic candidates for State offices at the Spring election were present. The speeches of Governor Murphy and Commissioner Van Wagoner were broadcast over a State-wide hookup.

"Same Old Smile"
Sounding the keynote of Oakland County's "homecoming" for "Pat", Assistant Attorney-General Charles P. Webster expressed what meant most to the honor guest's Oakland County friends—that despite his rise to high place and State-wide renown, "his smile is still the same old smile, his warm, vigorous handshake is still the same old handshake, his friendships are still the same old friendships, and that steadfastness of purpose toward the end of effort."

made a better place to live in for the common man. And both hide behind the friendly manners and buoyant, optimistic, and witty personalities large reservoirs of genuine ability that has sometimes been little suspected by some close to them, but which have been proven by their common achievements arising from humble circumstances to positions of high public responsibility.

Although his exceptional-public record in his home county of Oakland had attracted State-wide attention, the fact that the new State Highway Commissioner was only 35 caused some questioning.
