STATE HATCHERY PARKS CLOSED TO TRAILER CAMPERS

The well-kept grounds of state hatcheries, refuge headquarters and field conservation posts will definitely not be open to the trailer user and tourist camper this year.

Rules and regulations governing the public use of state lands adopted by the state conservation commission at its April meeting, gives the Director of Conservation authority to forbid public uses where such would interfere with Departmental operations.

The ubiquitous trailer car and tourist camper may have the "run" of state lands, but not hatchery grounds and similar other sites where signs will be raised against camping.

Regulations otherwise are the same as last year. Providing that no camping group may remain on any site for more than 15 days without written permission from proper authorities or leave or dump any kind of refuse on state lands or in streams or lakes. They also forbid mutilation or unauthorized removal of live trees, shrubs, plants, sand, gravel or marl from state lands.

Posting of advertising signs on trees or signboards is emphatically forbidden and no fire can be built without proper provision against its spreading; nor left temporarily or permanently while it is burning. Other regulations forbid camping on certain areas and provide for sanitation and protection of buildings, and apply particularly to such state lands as state forests, game refuges, game areas and developed sites, other than state parks which have special regulations.

Violations of regulations subject the individual to arrest, fine or imprisonment.
