There and soldlers at the grave side who survived the router of the heads of the heroes. There and soldlers at the grave shot down. They have their muskets, and they fire blank and their muskets, and they fire blank cartridges—a salute to the dead of their service to our country. There is so greater honor possible in this world than to sacrifice ones in buttle; but they are happy, and why shouldn't they be? There is so greater honor possible in this world than to sacrifice your life for your country. Eesides the graves are people young land old; and has the services and honored words for those brave solders come to an end, the boys and girls, men and women, march around the graves large their beautiful flowers our those who deserve greater praise than man can speak.

MEMORIAL DAY

By Meryl Markle

One more the leaves of the calendar have been torn off until May has finally popped out its green head, crowning the earth with its beauty. Memorial Day is celebrated on May thirtleth in commemoration of the solddlers who died upon the battle fields of the Givil War, the Phillipine Insurrection, the Chian Boyer's Rebellioni, and the great World War, where unsung heroes save their prededus lives for the betterment of their country.
