BUILDING TESTS WALLS FOR FAIR

NEW YORK (Special).—Although the opening date of the New York World's Fair is still almost two years away, the Fair site already has a building that mystifies all persons who pass that way and one that is of great interest to the contractors and builders of the whole country. The big sign says it is the "test building." The building can be made to do a lot of things just about of a late dance step. It can be made to twist, heave, buckle, sag or otherwise contort, all at the will of the Fair's engineers. It has a sawed-off tower arrangement on one end. Some sections of its walls are dazzling under the sun and are, obviously, encrusted with bits of broken glass. Its four walls in fact, comprise 43 different set-ups of material, supports and surface coatings. When it is done it will, say Fair officials, since it is just a set of walls upon which to try out the merits of various types of wall coating and stucco treatments.
 The durability, appearance and structural peculiarities of walls are of great importance to the Fair, since its 300 buildings will require around 15,000,000 square feet of such enclosures.
 The interior of this "wall laboratory" is given over to the Corporation's illumination engineers and their experimentation with new lighting devices.

PACIFIC FIR GOES TO NEW YORK FAIR

NEW YORK (Special).—"Good old Douglas fir" from the Pacific Northwest will provide the foundations for the most spectacular of wonders at the New York World's Fair of 1939. This was learned when the Fair Corporation officials in the Empire State building announced the purchase of more than $100,000 worth of fir pilings from the National Pole Treating Company. This particular lot of fir sticks will be driven into the ash at the 121st-acre exposition site to guarantee the support of the two unique structures forming the Theme Centre of the "Nation's Fair." These are the 200-foot Perisphere, a globe seemingly supported on the waters of fountains, and the Trylon, a 700-foot triangular needle or beacon and broadcasting tower.
 Shipments of the 1200 sticks, 95 to 99 feet in length, are taking place this month, after creosote treatment has been accorded them either at the National Pole and Treating Company's plant at Hilliard, Washington, or at the Minneapolis yards.
 This is the Fair's second purchase of fir from Northwest sources. An order for 700 sticks of similar length was filled early this year from Oregon cuttings. This earlier shipment of piling supports the Fair's $600,000 Administration Building already erected on the grounds.

HIGHWAY DEPT. TO INSTALL CROSSING SIGNALS

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner announced today that flashing signals will be installed at 44 railroad grade crossings as a phase of the grade separation program this year.
 The program also includes the construction of 33 grade separations previously announced. Federal funds will finance the entire grant with the exception of right-of-way costs for grade separation construction. Each flashing signal will cost $2,500 with $10,000 allotted for the entire work.
 Every railroad crossing on the trunkline system today has some method of protection. Approximately 250 crossings are protected by grade separations or have been eliminated by recent highway relocations. More than 500 depend upon flashing signals or reflectorized cross buck signs for protection.
 The flashing signals will be installed in rural areas or small towns where there is a relatively light combination of railroad and highway traffic. The signals will be timed to flash twenty seconds before a train traveling 70 miles an hour reaches the crossing.
