Don't Teach DemocracyDemocracy is not taught in our schools, declares Dr. Mowat G.
Fraser, Lecturer in Education at the University of Michigan, in an article in the current issue of the University School of Education's Bulletin.The words "democracy" and "democratic" are used in the publicity of schools and education associations, says Dr. Fraser, but methods of attaining the democratic ideal and consideration of how a government really for the people and by the people can be brought about, is no place in our schools. "Not a single American textbook in theoretical studies," he asserts, "gives any emphasis whatever to the need for considering controversial issues in the light of the ideal of equal, maximum opportunity for all."Pear, says Dr. Fraser, is the reason behind this crucial omission in our teaching. "The plain fact is," he explains, "that perhaps a great majority of teachers of the social studies, as well as school administrators, are afraid to encourage study of methods of attaining democracy in America."Our schools must build future citizens who believe in and desire democracy, Dr. Fraser states, and we must encourage them to enact when they become older, the legislation which is needed to provide political, economic, educational, racial, and racial national opportunity for all.Gundry to Meet
