LOSEY CORNERS

Nineteen attended the Bible class party held Friday evening at the home of the class president, William Foster. The name "Guld-Star" was adopted as a class name. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. E. Fredericks, Mrs. E. Sprone, Mrs. T. Beach and Mrs. R. Owens were guests of Mrs. Lang at the district conference of the parent-teachers of Wayne County, Thursday. The conference was held at the Northville Training School. A most interesting and instructive program was prepared starting in the morning with music by the Northville High School band and ending late in the afternoon with the "Mother Singers." A personal touch was added when Mrs. Sprone met Miss Star, her teacher of 20 years ago.

The mid-year session of Michigan Conference will be held at Lake Odessa, with Rev. C. N. Storms as pastor host. Among those who will attend from Hope Chapel are Mrs. R. Fredericks, delegate for the year; Rev. and Mrs. Knapp, and William and Mrs. Foster.

The following officers were elected for the year at the monthly meeting of the W. M. A. Mrs. Helen Dixon, President; Mrs. Fredericks, Vice-president; Mrs. W. Fenske, Secretary and Mrs. Ruth Noble, Treasurer. The delegates elected to attend the May conference at Hastings were Mrs. Violet Dallas, Mrs. R. Fredericks and Mrs. W. Fenske.

At the Taxpayers Association, Wednesday evening, several new members were taken in and the entertainment committee announced the April meeting will be a card party at West Point Park Community Hall, April 13. There is no charge and all are welcome.

Mr. W. Fenske, while moving a heavy piece of furniture fractured two ribs, but is recovering nicely from the injury.

Help Maintain Balance of Wild Game, Have More During Hunting Season Is Theme of National Restoration Week

County and city chairmen through Michigan are cooperating in the sale of stamps reproduced from paintings of wild animals and birds. Part of penny stamp sales will be used by local organizations for conservation projects approved by the state committee. The 16 different designs were drawn by J. N. "Ding" Darling. Michigan's quota of stamps has been set at 2,500,000.

A campaign to end careless destruction of wild game will start in all parts of the nation Sunday, March 20, and last one week.

Restoration week in Michigan will be observed in a variety of luncheon clubs, women's organizations and conservation groups, and over the radio. A national hookup from Washington with outstanding wildlife workers speaking will be one of the features of the week. Special announcements also are to be given over the air from Michigan State College and other stations in the state.

Balance Is Upset
Hunters and trappers have reported a gradual decline in wild animals of the nation from year to year. This is regarded as alarming by State and Federal game authorities. It seems the balance of nature has been upset, and wanton killing by man, both inside and outside the law, has done much toward creating this unnatural condition. Upsetting the balance between predator and prey can affect man economically as well as rob him of game during the regular hunting season, zoologists say.

DEMOCRAT MEETING
The Democratic Club of the City and Township of Farmington will hold a special meeting at the Town Hall, Saturday evening, March 19. The campaign in Farmington Township is now under way. Matters of surprising interest are to be taken up for consideration. All interested in the Democratic Party, whether members of the club or not, are invited.

Clover and Old Maids

How a change in the balance of wildlife may affect man is shown in the illustration used by a scientist with a sense of humor—if all the old maids in England got married, England would have plenty of clover. It goes like this: Clover thrives when bees are numerous. But when field mice are abundant, there is a shortage of bees and a shortage of clover. If enough cats get loose in the fields, they will kill most of the mice, resulting in plenty of bees and plenty of clover. The scientist assumed that all the old maids in England owned cats, but if men were plentiful the old maids would have no use for cats, which would be forced to roam the field for food, eventually resulting in a nice clover crop. This procedure also would result in a shortage of old maids.

As an example of the balance the zoologists use the well-known predator and prey combination of the West, the coyote and the jack rabbit. If the coyotes can catch enough jackrabbits, they can survive, but if the jackrabbits escape, the coyotes will decrease. Both parties should be satisfied with a 50-50 result, for then the balance is maintained.

Carrying the illustration to the rabbit and the carrot is used for it is reasonable to assume that a carrot cannot defend itself. However, man can keep the rabbit from getting the carrot and other garden truck. If he succeeds the rabbit will suffer.

But, the conservation authorities ask, why does man need to continue his fight with the rabbit by hunting him with a gun, which upsets the important balance?

The authorities do not condemn hunting or fishing; they do condemn promiscuous destruction of game. Hunting and fishing are restricted by law to help nature maintain its balance.

If the laws, both legal and moral, are broken, man is hurt as much as the animals, the authorities say.

Part of next week's campaign will be the sale of wildlife stamps. Receipts from this sale will be divided between the wildlife federation and local conservation groups for wildlife projects.

Following is an excerpt from President Roosevelt's proclamation which sets up the purposes of the week:

"Whereas the carrying into effect of any program for the conservation of our hereditary wildlife—in the past seriously diminished and depleted by destructive exploitation and lack of proper understanding and sympathy—must enlist the support of all our citizens if the mistakes of the past are to be avoided in the future dealing with this important resource of incalculable social, economic, aesthetic and recreational value:

"To this end I call upon all citizens in every community to give thought during this period to the needs of the denizens of field, forest, and water and intelligent consideration of the best means for translating good intentions into practical action in behalf of these invaluable but incalculable friends. Only through the full co-operation of all can wildlife be restored for the present generation and perpetuated for posterity."
