Doris Waile, when they get out complexion, you drew velvet. Violet said, "Just temper. Shut your eyes. Good. A touch of the magic puff. Now open like it?" No woman can faintly imagine the adorable, lovely beauty PRINCESS PAT powder gives to every skin. For only Princess Pat has the marvelous almond base, incredibly soft, nervously beautifying.

praised; and his greatness is unsearchable. All they works shall praise thee, O Lord; and they shall bless thee."

Correlative passages to be read, from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 331): "The Scriptures imply that God is All-in-all. From this it follows that nothing possesses reality nor existence except the divine Mind and His ideas."

The public is cordially invited to attend the services of Eight Church of Christ, Scientist, Detroit, held in the Redford High school auditorium, Grand River at Six Mile Road.

Godfrey, Geoffrey Both

Forms of Teutonic Name Godfrey and Geoffrey are different forms of the same Teutonic name, meaning "divinely peaceful" or "the peace of God." But when we consider these names quite distinct. Godfrey is rather more common as a surname than as a given name, except for the German form, Gottfried, writes Florence Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Godfrey de Bouillon, Eleventh century, was one of the leaders of the first crusade and became the Latin ruler of Jerusalem. Many legends survive relating to his bravery and strength.

Godfrey (or Gottfried) von Strassburg, German court poet of the Thirteenth century, wrote the poem "Tristan and Isolde," which furnished Wagner the theme for his opera of the same name. The poem is based on an old Celtic legend.

Geoffrey of Monmouth, Twelfth century bishop of St. Asaph, wrote in Latin a "History of the Kings of Britain," which is one of the main sources of the Arthurian legend. It purports to be a translation of an ancient Cymric chronicle.

Geoffrey Chaucer (Fourteenth century) is called the father of English poetry. He was a soldier, held various appointments from the king and was sent on important foreign missions. His greatest work is "The Canterbury Tales," the prologue to which is one of the masterpieces of English literature.

Proud Groom in Hungary Gets Engagement Gifts

In the region of Mezokovked, about eighty miles from Budapest, Hungary, the prospective groom, not the bride, faces the better when a couple becomes engaged. For on the happy occasion the girl presents her fiancé with a beautiful shirt, elaborately embroidered in red and blue, a black 'engagement apron,' also heavily embroidered, two plates loaded with a roast duck, a stuffed chicken, a tart, cigarettes, apples, nuts and gingerbread.

Nor is this all. She is even expected to give the young man 40 to 50 pengos, or about ten dollars, which he treats all his friends to a bachelor party. The bride does not receive presents from her fiancé till the wedding, when he gives her a pair of shoes, a silk kerchief and the wedding ring.

Engagements in this case last one to two months, and in old times the wedding was a three-week affair, but later it was shortened to a mere day. The ceremony is one of the most picturesque travelers see in all Hungary, for the families of the couple turn out in their finest costumes. An invariable part of the ceremony is the robbing of the bride; if she does not weep loudly, it is considered very bad form indeed.

The Four Seasons

The civil or tropical year, the one commonly used in the measure of time, is the period which elapses from the sun's appearance on one of the tropical circles to its return to the same. It varies very slightly, and has a mean length of 365 days, 5 hours 48 minutes 47 seconds. Astronomically considered, the four seasons begin at the equinoctial or the solstitial points. The summer solstice is the meridian, passing through the point where the sun touches the Tropic of Cancer; the winter solstice is the meridian passing through the point where it touches the Tropic of Capricorn; and the equinoctial points are the points at which the sun's path or equinox crosses the celestial equator. All these points shift, according to very exact astronomical laws, from year to year; and so the precise times when the seasons begin are matters of mathematical calculations.

Owls That Are Beneficial

The owls of the country, which have been set aside as beneficial, are the barn owl, eastern screech owl, snowy owl, western burrowing owl, Northern barred owl, great gray owl, long-eared owl, short-eared owl and saw-whet owl. Only the barn owl has been set aside as judged harmful. Since this owl is none too common, one would do well to leave all of the owls well enough alone. They have a record for destroying vermin that is little less than amazing.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Ample notice of change of address should be given when moving. Notice should be given before changing if possible.

Change Wires on Pole to Spare Rare Birds

Three years or more ago, fish-hawks built their nests on a couple of telephone poles near Brantford, Ontario, on the Connecticut River. Each spring they have returned to enlarge the old homesteads and rear new broods. They will undoubtedly be back again this year. And with them they will bring a minor problem for the telephone company.

The nests are veritable log cabins. Involvement of stable sticks to a depth of about 15 inches, and four feet across. Located on the cross-arms, they cover the insulators and Lineman examining fish-hawk nest on top of telephone pole. To avoid disturbing birds, the telephone company plans to transfer wires to new cross-arm placed below the one they occupy.

The telephone company plans to surround the telephone wires. And the moisture which the nest material retains is corroding the wires. The fish-hawk domiciles are interfering with telephone service.

It would be easy enough to knock the nests down, having the hawks to choose other homes. But state law forbids it. The birds are rare, and neither they nor their nests may be disturbed.

The telephone company plans to transfer the cross-arms to the fish-hawks, placing another cross-arm below, the one occupied by each nest and transferring the wires to it. In sole possession of the top cross-arm, the birds may continue to increase their kind from year to year and to deplete the fish in the nearby waters of Long Island Sound.
