H. S. Band Receives Eight New Instruments

Much discussion recently has concerned the rumbling on School street. Some say the Spanish War has moved in on the good citizens of Farmington; others, that the unsettled conditions of the weather are accountable for this disturbance. Be not alarmed, for after a close investigation it is found that the High School band has a new set of tympani.

It also has been fortunate in obtaining two new flutes, played by Arlene Kellogg and Fred Hamlin; two baritone, played by Robert Ham and Margaret Miles; and three new saxophones, played by Irving Light, Edward Maas and Roland Smith.

Mr. Benner and the band are proud of the new instruments and extend a personal invitation to the people of Farmington to see and hear them at their spring concert April 26.

Art Class Plaques Attract Attention

The Art class, under the direction of Charles Baker, has made some beautiful and colorful plaques. They are on the art class bulletin board in the hall on the second floor of the school.

The plaques are made of heavy beaver board painted with opaque water colors.

The object of making them was to study color combinations and also learn how to fit designs into certain areas, circular and octagonal.

After obtaining a suitable design, it was traced on the beaver board, then painted and allowed to dry. A thin layer of shellac was applied to give it a smooth and glossy finish and also to make it water resistant.

These plaques have attracted much attention and the art class bulletin is becoming a popular gathering place.

Changes in Building

It is interesting to remember that only within the last 40 years have the larger office buildings been built with steel frames. Sometimes window frames are made of metal, not even putty being used to hold in the glass. Steel frames are frequently used even in residences, and posts of iron and steel filled with cement save much space in the basement.

New methods of heating and ventilating such as air-conditioning, also have changed work in many ways. Plastering, too, so often unsatisfactory, now is being superseded; recently a large modern school building was built without any plaster at all.

The use of electric appliances often makes necessary a double wiring of the home, one system for light and one for power. Plumbing fixtures have increased not only in number, but also in form. Lead pipes were used some time ago; now brass and iron pipes are manufactured in parts that fit together easily.

A number of changes are taking place in the building of houses. Examples are: The casting of a house in one piece in cement, the use of sheet iron in building walls and construction of houses and offices with their unbreakable glass. Wall board, linoleum, aluminum, rubber and many other substances will doubtless be used more in the future.

HIGH SCHOOL BUILDS SAND BOX FOR GRADES
Clarence Bell, with the aid of several high school students, set up a new sand box in the back of the high school for the children of the lower grades.

The box is made of telephone poles, securely fastened with bolts at each end. It has an area of 144 square feet inside. The poles and the sand were furnished by the city.

The children have had much fun playing in the sand and they keep busy making different objects and layouts.

WOMEN'S ARMY IS READY FOR FINAL ATTACK ON CANCER

The Women's Field Army is ready for the final attack in its 30-day educational campaign to cut down the mortality from cancer. The Women's Field Army in Michigan, the state organization, sponsored by the American Society for the Control of Cancer, is commanded by Mrs. C. G. Keyworth, president of the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs.

"This is a woman's army because the majority of the 150,000 people who die annually from cancer in the United States are women," Mrs. Keyworth says. The mortality rate could have been cut in half last year if people really knew the facts about cancer and its treatment and acted on this knowledge instead of fearfully cloaking themselves in secrecy, waiting for the end.

What are the facts about cancer? No other disease has been shrouded with as much mystery and misinformation, according to Dr. O. A. Brines, chairman of the cancer committee of the Michigan State Medical Society. Here are some of the facts:

Cancer is not caused by germs and is not contagious.

Cancer is not caused nor influenced by diet. Articles of food such as tomatoes, meat, bread, milk, or the use of aluminum utensils for cooking have no effect in producing the disease; neither has electric refrigeration.

Cancer is not a blood disease and has nothing to do with "bad blood."

Cancer is not a particularly painful disease; in fact, pain is usually absent in the early stages. Cancer cannot be cured by medicine taken internally nor by salves or ointments.

Cancer is not necessarily a "horrible" disease. The horrible cases are the neglected ones. Unreasoning fear is one of the greatest obstacles in the control of cancer. Cancer is not an incurable disease. In its early stages while it is still localized, it can be more effectively and decisively attacked than many other major diseases. The removal of a small piece of tissue for microscopic examination, which is the only method known to science for actually determining whether cancer is present, is not harmful.

Cancer is a disorderly growth of cells of the patient's body tissues. This growth does not respond to the laws that control activities of normal cells; it seldom ceases during the life of the individual unless removed, and the tissue so formed never functions as normal tissue in the same individual.

For the rest of this month, the Field Army will carry on an intensive program of education to make the facts about cancer clear to the public and to urge everyone who has a symptom that might obviously be caused by incipient cancer to go immediately to a reputable physician for expert diagnosis and treatment. Ignorance of the facts about cancer, fear and procrastination are responsible for making cancer today No. 2 in the causes of mortality in the United States, exceeded only by death from heart disease.
