Tuberculosis is among the 10 principal causes of death in Michigan during 1931, according to provisional statistics announced this week by Dr. Don W. Gudakunst, state health commissioner—Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

WHAT a convenience sometimes to be able to shop by 'phone! No need to "drop everything" and go out on particularly busy days—or in bad weather.
How nice—and how important—to be in touch with the world even when you're home alone! The pleasant chat with the friend you don't have time to visit... the last-minute arrangements for spontaneous get-togethers, bridge games, movie parties and general good times with people you like—all these are made possible by your telephone.
No wonder so many women say: "I couldn't keep house without a telephone!" In so many practical ways this modern servant pays its own small salary—and for good measure adds much to the joy of living.

Her Beauty Sleep

By RUBY DOUGLAS
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

"IT DOES seem like the irony of Fate that you should have had a fire that night," laughed Janice Burt as she laid aside her book. "And you lost it."

"What was this grand new 'beauty sleep' you were trying on this night of all nights?" asked Janice, still amused.
Eileen shook her head disconsolately. "Oh—don't ask me about it. And there I stood on the balcony in front of my room—the very spot I had so often pictured myself in! But instead of looking wonderfully lovely and wraithlike and ethereal in a pale, romantic moonlight—I was a veritable comic valentine. My hair was done in metal waves that stuck out like Topsy's pigtail all over my head. I had a frown radiating between my eyes to smooth out the lines I am getting because I won't wear glasses. I had this white egg smeared on my face and it had dried in!"

"I sounded like some beauty sleep."
"I had wanted to look particularly well at the party tomorrow night and I was going to try this for two or three nights. I wanted to look well because Tom Harper, whom I haven't seen for three years, is visiting his cousin Bert. You know I always liked Tom, and then—he went away."
"What has that to do with the fire?" asked Janice.
"Everything—stupid. Don't you know that we have only a volunteer fire department in our village? You city folks know so little about suburban problems. And don't you realize that every male who is not half dead of ennui dashes out to every fire—midnight or not? And can't you begin to see that Bert dragged his cousin Tom out with him and that there they stood with the ladder at the foot of my balcony waiting to make a heroic rescue and me—oh—"

"I suppose you would rather have smothered to death in the smoke," suggested Janice. "But I do begin to see."
"I climbed down the ladder with the whole family and all the firemen—including Tom—waiting at the foot to grab me in their arms. I never was so mortified in all my life."
"I just can't help it," sobbed Eileen, giving way to the emotion that she had controlled ever since the fire. "I know it is silly, but—"

The sound of automobile wheels crunching the blue stone driveway cut short Eileen's cry.
"Oh, who is it now—of all times?" she asked, drying her tears.
Tom Harper pulled up in front of the porch and stopped the car. He jumped out and was at the door before Eileen could disappear. "You go to the door," she said to Janice, as she hurried to the door.
Eileen with both hands outstretched. "I do hope you are none the worse," he said earnestly, looking into her eyes. "I have been so concerned. And you were so wonderfully brave."

Janice knew that the man before her had not seen the cutters nor the beautifying lotion nor the wig she had worn. She knew and it thrilled her to be in the environment of so new and so romantic a love.
And then the whole story came out and Eileen forgot that she had been on the verge of a thoroughly good cry. The relief she experienced at the knowledge that Tom had not thought her dreadful after all these years of separation was enough to chase away the tears.
"Oh—I really must run upstairs and unpack. My frock for tomorrow needs attention," said Janice hurriedly. "I—"

"I don't blame you one bit, and I hope you'll forgive me, but I just can't wait another moment," said Tom.
Janice left them alone, and then there Tom told Eileen that he had never experienced so dreadful a moment as when he beheld her alone on that balcony where, every moment, he expected to see flames bursting out of the windows.
He told her many other things, and among them the fact that he had not even seen the cutters!

"Then you do love me," whispered Eileen.
Constitution-Maker
Pelatiah Webster was a Philadelphia business man, remembered for his advocacy of a revision of the Articles of Confederation by creating a new Constitution in his "Declaration of the Political Union and Constitution of the Thirteen United States of North America (1783)." He is, therefore, sometimes considered as the originator of the Constitution, though his plan was unlike the product of the federal convention.

Birth of the Jurikisha
In 1871 at Yokohama an American Baptist missionary, Rev. Jonathan Goble, wished to provide outdoor exercise for his invalid wife. He showed a Japanese carpenter the picture of a baby carriage in Godey's Lady's Book and from that evolved the plan and form of the Jurikisha.

The Golden Text, (Isaiah 59:20), is: "The Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord."
Among the Bible citations in this passage (II Cor. 6:17, 18): "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 326): "The purpose and motive to live aright can be gained now. Working and praying with true motives, your Father will open the way."

He wanted to caress her cheeks
Her complexion fascinated him. Scarcely met, yet already he was thrilled. Dozens of girls were pretty. But only this one lured him with the exquisite velvet of her skin. You Can Depend on the Man Who ADVERTISES

Nine times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only... but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good-will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.
