The Clash

THE clash was inevitable. It could not be avoided. It had started several weeks ago, when Jim had arrived home after a hard day at the office, eaton his supper, and began lolling back in his favorite chair while reading the evening paper. Presently Kate, his spouse, came in. "Have you forgotten your promise already?" she inquired, a bit timidly, a bit afraid, as though fearing him.

Jim twisted around in his chair, and squinted at her. "What promise?" "Oh, Jim, you have forgotten!" "Uh-huh!"

"Why, you promised to take me to see a show tonight. I've been waiting for you all day, and counting the minutes, too."

"I'm sorry, dear. But I wouldn't go anyway. I'm all in, and I want a bit of rest before the morning. These late hours don't agree with me, and then the boss don't like them. Maybe some other time."

Kate turned to go, but then stopped as if by an impulse, and returned to Jim's chair.

"Perhaps you'll take me some other night this week, then?" she asked.

For a moment he considered. "Nope, not this week. I'm filled up with business engagements the whole week. Haven't a minute to spare after tonight."

And then Kate, not being able to withhold a smoldering anger any longer, broke loose.

"So that's what I get for keeping house for you? I slave here all day, and then when you come home I've got to be a darling, and sit beside you to the very end, just because you don't want to go out. I'm entitled to as much freedom."

"Well, why don't you take it?" broke in Jim.

"If I will, if I'm not treated as I should be."

"You're magnifying all my faults ten times, dear."

And so that was that. The climax came one morning several weeks later, when Jim, in his eternal rush, came down to breakfast, and found his eggs boiled too hard.

"Well, what's the idea? You know I don't like my eggs as hard as that."

"I couldn't help it. I forgot them when I went to call you."

"Couldn't help it? What do you mean?" he threw back at her, sarcastically. He was in a peevish mood this morning; he had spent half the night perfecting a set of plans which he was to show the boss this morning. "I'm likely to be late at the office, now, just because I've got to eat a couple of eggs which taste like dry potatoes."

"Oh, I'm getting sick and tired of hearing about you and your office. You talk as if your whole destiny were tied up in it."

"It is," said Jim simply.

"And another thing I've got good and sick of," continued Kate, "is your eternal business."

"Well, what of it?" "I'm going to break away from it. I'm going to have my own way just as much as you have yours. And—"

Jim, grimly silent, laid down his spoon and rose from the table. He crushed the morning edition of the paper into his pocket.

"Very well, Kate," he said with set teeth and a pale face, "you can have your own way. I'm going to live at the club from now on."

And then he was gone. Over his meal that same evening he seemed to wonder why he felt so downcast. There seemed to be a great emptiness somewhere inside him, and even the food on the dish before him did not have the same taste as before. He wondered if Kate was the reason.

Later he decided to return home and collect some of his clothes. He found Kate in the library, her head in the crook of her arm, weeping bitterly.

"Pardon me," said Jim coldly, "but may I go upstairs and get some of my clothes together and take them away with me?"

Kate raised a tear-stained face and nodded dumbly. If she was expecting sympathy from her husband she was greatly mistaken. Jim began to take the stairs two at a time, as though he wished to leave her as soon as possible. But as he reached the bank he heard a voice call after him, timidly, and hardly above a whisper.

He turned in his tracks and sent a quizzing "Well?" down at her. "Can I speak to you a moment?" "Go ahead, but hurry up."

"I want you to come back, Jim."

"But I mean it. I realize how selfish I've been now. I see that you are working for my good and for the comfort of the one who is to come in several weeks. And now I know that I want you even if I can't have everything I want. We can forget our petty differences. For a moment Jim was obscure. But a sudden warmth filled his soul and he fled down the steps toward Kate.

is "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Isaiah 40:11): "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 518): "Love giveth to the least spiritual idea might, immortality, and goodness, which shine through all as the blossom shines through the bud. All the varied expressions of God, reflect health, holiness, immortality—infinite Life, Truth, and Love."

Eighth Church of Christ, Scientist, Detroit, cordially invites the public to attend its services. Hours and location are published in an advertisement in this paper.

FISH AGAIN
In MICHIGAN!

To be free from care
... drive with care!

NATURE and man, together, have made Michigan a superb fishing State. Nature contributed 2000 streams and 5000 lakes. Man adds wise conservation, 16 fish hatcheries—and plants about 200 million little fish every year.

That's why Michigan abounds in fish that are waiting for your hook and line: Brook trout, brown trout, rainbow trout; bass, perch, pickerel; blue gills, sunfish, muskellunge.

To supplement perfect angling, you have fine highways and other transportation facilities... canoes, power boats and sailing craft for hire... bathing beaches... overnight cabins... and camping sites galore.

Choose Michigan—the perfect State for a perfect vacation!
