Township Police Get Traffic Grant

FARMINGTON Farmington Township Police Chief Irving Yakes has received approval for a $60,000 federal grant to bolster the traffic enforcement in the township for the next three years.

Yakes made the announcement Thursday that the proposal he had submitted in May 1970 had finally been funded, under the Highway Safety Act.

Yakes said he was extremely happy to get the funds, and that it would mean that in about three months four new patrolmen would be on the roads handling strictly traffic problems.

"IN THE PAST we just haven't had enough men to do an adequate job. We could use 30 or more men, and we often don't have time to work on enforcement of traffic laws," Yakes said.

The department currently has 10 men, including plain clothes detectives and officers.

The four new men must be hired, and go through the standard 240-hour training program before they can begin work, Yakes said.

In addition to the men, the grant will mean more equipment and a clerk. INCLUDED in the equipment is a Vascor speed detection unit, highly praised for its extreme accuracy in catching speeders. The grant will also cover uniforms and even training expenses.

Yakes said he wished he could also get approval on two other requests for federal funds he has made: for better radio equipment, and for narcotics officers.
