NEW YORK — "Unity," the sculpture by Harry Poole Camden, of Parkersburg. West Virginia, which won for him the $10,000 prize in the conlest for sculpture to embellish the United States Government Building at the New York World's Fair 1939. The group represents a typical American family being sheltered by the symbol of "Unity." There were 430 contestants in the competition, which was held in the Fair's Hall of Communications.

Named for a Plonier Lossen peak, the southeramost in the Cascade range, elevation 10,453 feet, was named after Peter Lassen, a ploneer of the 1840s, says Nature Magazine. It dominates the topography of the area yet is eastly accessible to a normally active person. A trail, two and one half miles in length, leads to the top of the mountain.

Silverware Once Graced
Only Tables of Royalty

Silverware Once Graced
. Only Tables of Royality Twenty-five hundred years ago King Croesus had silver on his table.
But long before that rulers of ancient Egypt and Greece, were using vessels of the shining metal. Down through the centuries, writes Alice R. Rollins in the Los Angeles Times, silver has been designed and fashioned by skillful arisans. In the early centuries of the art silver was produced for royalty and for the nobility. It is only in the last 509 years that it has become possible for the households of lesser rank to have silver on their tables. Gradhave silver on their tables. nobility. It is only in the last 500 years that it has become possible for the households of lesser rank to have silver on their tables. Gradually in all countries as men became rich through foreign commerce, domestic silver campe into wider use. Table services became more elaborate and new uses were found for this metal. In Holland, the art of the silversmith flourished and designs of distinction and besuty were produced. The postersion of solld silver in the period of the silversmith flourished and designs of distinction and besuty were produced. The borders of these trays are usually east from dies and attached to the body by means of lead. Those most familiar are the gadroon, vine leaves and grapes, beading and twisted coil.

Many Superstitions Are Kept Alive by Old Salts "As superstitions as asilor," is an old saying and a true one, asserts a writer in London Tit.Blist Magatine. There seems to be something about the sea that in thead days of common sense and sophistication keeps alive the belief in old superstitions. An old salt will whistle for a wind, but not too shrilly, lest he summon a hurricane; if he sneezes on the port side when going abroard the voyage is likely to prove unlucky, but should he sneezes to starbedra favorable winds are to be expected.
The should he sneezes to starbedra favorable winds are to be expected.
The should he sneeze to starbedra favorable winds are to be exbedra setting and; in Scoland it is unlucky to lock at a flat-footed woman if her feet are bare; in all ports it is considered courling disaster to change the name of a vessel.

The landsman's dislike of doing anything important upon a Friday that falls on the thriteenth of any month, is echoed by the seamen, for many vessels, even ocean-going liners, have postponed their sailing until five minutes after the close of that falsed date.
