CONSUMERS ASKS COMMISSION FOR BUILDING APPROVAL

Rural electrification in Michigan reached another milestone recently as Consumers Power Company, serving a major part of the agricultural territory of the Lower Peninsula, asked the Michigan Public Utilities Commission for formal approval of a much liberalized rural construction plan.

Consumers now builds rural lines at its own expense where customers average five to ten miles. Approval of the new plan by the Utilities Commission will mean the company will build rural lines free regardless of the number of customers to the mile. Only requirement is that the customers jointly guarantee a total monthly revenue of $12.50 per mile of line.

"This new plan makes electricity available to additional thousands of Michigan farmers at the lowest rates ever quoted by any company or cooperative association," said Dan E. Karn, vice president and general manager of the company.

STATE COMMISSION

ALLOWS 209,439

JOB APPLICATIONS

The Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission announced recently that 209,439 applications for job insurance benefits had been processed and allowed, and that 20,178 had been denied on the basis of lacking in either wage credits, or other requirements that constitute eligibility under the law.

"The work of checking the applications against wage records, on file with the commission has moved with rapidity," said Executive Director Abner E. Larned.

"For the first time since applications were received July 1, the Claims and Benefits division operated on a five day basis. This we were able to do, because the last week applications had been reduced to normal.

Careful Planning

"Much of the success of the operation is due to the careful planning and hard work of the executives in charge of the processing and the hundreds of young men and women who performed the actual work.

"The latest figures show that approximately 9 per cent of the claims filed will not be paid unless additional information is received to change the status of the applications. In some of these cases employers may have made unintentional errors. In such cases corrections will remedy the situation.

"This is a good record and shows how carefully the work of gathering wage reports and filing them has been done."

It is estimated that a majority of the benefit checks will be close to $16 because the auto workers eligible for benefits earned wages to qualify them for maximum benefits during the two closing quarters of 1937. This condition will prevail particularly in the Detroit area.
