It's True What They Say About Dixie Town

You see sperm oil lamps every where. The art of making intelligible is said to be a lost one, so a lamp shade at Green Leaves is most unusual. Its panels are carved out of stone in such a way that the thin portions are lighter, and when the lamp is lighted the realistic figures of the design are thrown in high relief.

We must not forget the gardens, so here's a glimpse of one. The rear of the building forms a rectangular patio with galleries opening into it. Stepping stones lead to a bird bath, and borders of azalias, jessamine, and japonicas make a carnival of color and fragrance. A fern oak more than thirteen feet around shades a large area, and a long lattice supports a huge vistraria. A landscaped section extends from the patio to the back street, and is shut in by a high brick wall. A crimson Rambler covers this wall, and there are hedges of leucostri, tapering arbor vitae, and beds of iris and larkspur. The large swimming pool at the end is bordered by shrubs.

Add Beauty

Borders of live oaks along the long front drive add beauty to plantation homes. These trees are hung with Spanish moss which filters the sunlight, giving a beautiful effect.

Lansford, located in a veritable fish structure, octagonal in shape, designed by Sloan, the noted Philadelphia architect. It was only partly completed when the war broke out in 1918, and was never finished. All the bricks were burned on the place by slaves, and the timber is of time-defying cypress. It still has the original roof and the hand-carved columns supporting the ornate gallery.

Card spring for the past seven years the Natchez Garden Club has sponsored a "Pilgrimage." During this time Natchez recreates the days of the Old South, when in antebellum homes you are welcomed by ladies in hoop skirts, girls in bonnets and erminolines, and by typical southern colonels. Old-fashioned balls, historical pageants, and other colorful events are presented. You never get tired when you step into the past at Natchez.

Epworth League Notes

By Carl Smith
One festival observed each year by every Epworth League is the Booth Festival. This event in the past years has always been looked forward to as the outstanding entertainment program of the League season. I am sorry you do not have one every other week because we do have a barrel of fun on each occasion.

Without this date in mind to look forward to each year, I believe half the fun of the League would be destroyed. It is a day set aside when every one of us draws a special red ring around that date on his calendar and labels it "The Booth Festival." It always falls on Saturday so that everyone will be there.

Speaking of that football game, we could send our own team from Farmington in against the whole Ann Arbor District. What do you say about that, fellow? Here's the setup: Jim Eby, tackle; Parker center; Rick Held, halfback; Bill Mitchell, halfback; Bob Piettenberg, quarterback; Dick Brown, tackle; Arnold Miller, guard; Ernest Ham, tackle; Ted Smith, end; Bert Norton, end; and I could probably play way, way back. How does that sound for an All-American eleven? Subs? Oh, yes. Well, the girls can be our replacements. Someone asked me what all this business was about Saturday. Who gets the food we take over to Chelsea? What do they do with it? Well, to answer all your questions at once, here's the story. We are taking the food to the Methodist Old Peoples' Home, which is located in Chelsea, and they take care of it by feeding the old people who are in the home. Does that answer all of your questions? If not, I'll see you at 8:00 in the League room on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin of Birmingham, and Mr. and Mrs. Allen of Redford, spent Saturday evening with Mrs. Phoebe Ross and Mrs. Rhoda Roche.

At The Redford Theatre

The rise of American swing music serves as the background for the love story in "Alexander's Rag Time Band," which plays Friday through Monday at the Redford Theatre. Tyrone Power is discovered at the opening of the picture as the leader of Alexander's Rag Time Band, which is making its first bid for fame in a rowdy honky-tonk in the colorful San Francisco of the Barbary Coast days.

Singing with the band is Alice Fay, whose temperament causes her to be constantly at sword's points with Power. An open break between the two is averted by the arranger and song writer for the band, the role played by Don Ameche.

Billed with this picture at the Redford is "Shipwreck Angel," starring Margaret Sullivan and James Stewart.

"Racket Busters," with Humphrey Bogart and George Brent takes over the Redford screen from Tuesday through Thursday. It is a story taking advantage of the activities of New York's fighting district attorney, Dewey. Bogart, as "Dead End" fame, is particularly sinister and effective in his role of racketeer extraordinaire.

Running with "Racket Busters" is "Safety in Numbers" with the Jones Family.
